A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

Patrick Lynch, a young Newcastle West man, when brought before the Newcastle West Petty Sessions on a charge of stealing a pair of trousers, received a good character from the parish priest and Mr. R. Nash, and as the value of the articles was only 5s., Mr. J. P. Laven, his solicitor, urged that he be released under the First Offenders' Act. On the other hand, D. I. Rowan said the man was a wretchedly drunken creature, and his wife had to support her family with no, or very little, assistance from him. Lynch was bound to the peace for twelve months, and his wife, who was charged with him, was discharged. Constable O'Hara proved the case, and Kate Reidy said Mrs. Lynch pawned the trousers (which belonged to Pat Broder) for half a crown.
