 The deceased, who was a native of Limerick, was foreman fitter on the West-Clare Railway Works at Ennis, and had been there for a considerable time. He was very popular with the men who worked under him, and gave entire satisfaction to his employers. With the public he was a general favourite, and his demise at the early age of 28 years, was received by them with expressions of profound regret.
