DEATH OF A JEWELLER.

With regard to the regrettable death of Mr. Charles McConachy, assistant jeweller at Mrs. Ryan's, George street, the news of which was received with general regret by his many friends, we are glad to be able to state that the death was not so startlingly sudden as was reported. Mr. McConachy had been ailing for some time, and on Wednesday was seized with a weakness and internal hemorrhage, which compelled him to take to his bed. Dr. Laird was called in and attended the patient through the night, and the Rev. Father Lee also attended and administered the last consolations of the Church, to which deceased belonged. Death took place peacefully at about nine o'clock in the morning in the presence of sorrowing friends. Since the above was written we have received the following letter from the Rev. Father Lee:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR,—Will you allow me to correct a misstatement which appeared in your issue of Thursday, 3rd inst., in reference to the death of Mr. McConachy, assistant jeweller at Mrs. Ryan's, George Street.

He did not, as stated in your paper, retire as usual on the night before his death, nor was his landlady shocked to find him dead next morning. The facts are as follows:—On the evening before his death, when he returned from business, he complained of feeling very ill. The doctor was called to him, and found his case so serious that he advised them to have his clergyman summoned to him. At his express wish I was called to attend him, and at his express desire I received him into the Church and administered to him the Sacrament for the dying. He died a little before nine o'clock next morning with the people of the house at his bedside.

The many friends of Mr. McConachy will be relieved to find that his death was not so sudden or so lonely as described in your paper of last Thursday, and that it happened attended by the ministrations of religion that he wished himself, i.e., those of the Catholic Church.

It is unnecessary to add that this latter circumstance explains the presence of the priests at his funeral.

Yours, etc.,

JOHN LEE, C.O.

St. Michael's.

The funeral took place yesterday at Mount St. Laurence, and was largely attended.
