 "A GOOD IMPRESSION."

people like to see a "good impression" in a newspaper—that is, that the type comes up clear and legible. But there is recorded a "good impression" in another way, which, we may be certain, was not fully appreciated by those who experienced it. In certain parks a number of the chairs had been lately painted a vivid green colour, and by some oversight placed there for use before the paint was roughly dry. In consequence a number of visitors carried away "a good impression," that on the men's dark coats being very noticeable. The worst impressions, however, were the ladies wearing light dresses.

 CHIPS.

Among the blind a one-eyed man is king.
 Imaginary evils soon become real ones by indulging in reflections on them.
 When a man feels that he is doing right, others think so.
 One of the greatest arts in life and one of the most neglected is that of finding happiness in little things.
 A mere globe-trotter stumbles on a thousand opportunities on his way round the world and returns home poorer in every way than the contemplative cobbler he left sticking to his last.

 PROSPECT FETE.

We desire to remind the public of the great Carnival at Prospect, which will be opened on Thursday evening next at five o'clock. As already stated, there will be no end of amusements, for the "shows" are numerous and varied. We have no doubt that there will be a very large attendance of the public at the Carnival, which will last till Saturday evening. It may be of interest to visitors to know that no raffle tickets will be sold on the grounds.
