KE'S MIXTURE

ED BLOOD PURIFIER,

THOUSANDS of Testimonials have been received from all parts. Read the following: Abscesses Cured.—Mrs. Clark, of 40, North-st., Tumbidgee Wells, writes: "Gentlemen,—I had been suffering from abscesses for many years, and after taking four bottles of your Blood Mixture am perfectly cured, and have not had the slightest sign of them since. My little boy also was suffering from the same disease.

PERMANENTLY

After giving him two bottles of your medicine he was cured, although at the time he was such an awful sight that I was ashamed for anyone to see him, abscesses being all over his body. You can make use of this testimonial so that it may reach other poor sufferers far and near, as I think it a remedy everyone should know.

BLOOD ABSCESS

diocese in Ireland named from a saint. Toirdheallach was fourth in descent from Eochaidh Balberg, who was son of Carthenn Finn, Prince of Thomond, who was baptised by St. Patrick at Singland, where the Irish had a great settlement long before Limerick was founded by the Norse.

Carthenn Finn was the grandson of Oas, son of Conall, son of Lughaidh Menn, the ancestor of the Dal gCais, who took possession of the district now named County of Clare, for the race of Lughaidh Menn were up to his time settled in the district now named County of Limerick. Lughaidh Menn was fourth in descent from Cormac Cas, King of Munster, and the great dolmen of Duntraillag, about a mile north of Galbally, is stated to be the grave of Cormac Cas, in Agallam-na-Benorach, and hence we may from this obtain an idea of the ancient territory of the Dal gCais, to whom the great families of County of Clare, the O'Briens, the O'Quins, the O'Deas, the MacNamras, &c., belong.

In Lough Corrib there is also a celebrated island named Inchiquin, from Irish "Inis maie hui Chuid," and of this island Sir William Wilde in his "Lough Corrib" gives particulars.

CARFERS IN CANADA.

The openings for women in Canada are many and ready to hand. Women wishing to retain independence and start out in some small business for themselves might do worse than go to that country.

Poultry-raising and fruit-preserving offer special inducements. "Home-made bread and pastry cakes and tea-rooms are wanted everywhere," says the Manitoba Free Press, "and a tea-room presided over by a woman of neat appearance, with two smart assistants, should give splendid returns to anyone undertaking such work. Openings for this business are now ready in Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Saskatoon, Edmonton, and in the newer towns springing up every day as railways open up the way.

"In this particular line," the writer says, "an English woman would require to bring with her two women table-waiters, and if the latter are of superior class they need feel no degradation in the work of waiting on the public, for many of the women to-day at the head of social life in Western Canada were themselves wage-earners."

THE LATE MISS E. DINEEN.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

On Thursday last, at the venerable age of 80 years, the demise of Miss E. Dineen took place at her residence, Ballingarry. In the touching event, which has occasioned feelings of great regret in the district, where her excellent virtues endeared her to all classes, a link with the past has been severed. On Friday evening the remains were interred in the local new cemetery, amid every manifestation of popular sympathy. A very large concourse of the public, with the parish clergy, were present. The deceased lady was a member of one of the oldest and most respected families in the district.

UNPARLIAMENTARY DEBATE.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Our Kilmrush correspondent says:—Absent your restrictions of Admiral—or rather Al Jernin—Joyce, M.P., as Mayor, in re "direct negative" amendments, we had something akin to the proceedings of the Kilmrush Board of Guardians on Saturday. It arose in reference to cross-fencing of members on local burning questions, when Mr. Bourke said the Guardians ought to restrain their heat, and to discuss and debate questions which came before them in a decent and Parliamentary manner. He made his appeal to the Board on two occasions during the day, and I am happy to state with a good deal of success.
