PATRONISING

At the Cork Industrial Conference, as well as locally, complaints were made as to the apathy in advertising by local producers, shopkeepers and retailers. It was bluntly said that there wasn't sufficient "push" among traders to make their commodities known, and thus help on the industrial movement. On the principle, "honour where honour is due," we shall print the following A B C of those who favour the "Chronicle" with their advertisements, and we trust that purchasers will give the preference to those who best show that they want public patronage, by asking for it, and whose continued presence before the public shows that they deserve and obtain public appreciation. Our readers will find full particulars of what each advertiser has to offer in the respective issues, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, as marked.
