The same was being proved in regard to country hospitals. The Royal Infirmary at Salisbury 25 years ago spent £300 on alcohol. Last year it spent only £7. There had been a gradual evolution of action on the part of the profession in the use of alcohol as a drug. Three years ago the medical profession throughout the United Kingdom had issued a petition to the Government asking it to introduce compulsory teaching in domestic hygiene and temperance in the elementary schools. The feeling in the old country that every child should be taught the elements of domestic hygiene and temperance was overwhelmingly strong, and had produced a very powerful effect on the Government. "We are only too well aware," concluded Sir Victor, "that the old country is a little lagging behind the Colonies in this respect, but we hope that she will gain fresh wind and cut a respectable figure in the race at any rate. If she is to take her place, if the physical deterioration of the race is to be arrested, and if our physical condition is to improve, it will be by the authority and agency of the medical profession."

SAD FATALITY AT BALLYBUNION.

CAUGHT IN THE CAVE.

A very sad fatality occurred at Ballybunion on Tuesday night. It would appear that a young man named Denis T. O'Connell and a number of others, finding the tide favourable, entered the Grand Cave without being provided with the usual torches necessary on such occasions, merely depending on the light of some candles carried by some of the visitors. Those familiar with the interior of the cave are aware of the existence of a second opening leading to the sea, and when some alarm was given those inside rushed for the passage to the sea, lured by the skylight at the time. The deceased, who had only recently recovered from a severe attack of rheumatics, was caught in this passage by the incoming tide, and before those about knew what had occurred the sad accident had taken place. Mr. O'Connell was still alive when taken from the sea, and was annointed by Rev. Father Trant, C.C., Ballybunion. Of those in the cave at the time, two young ladies who were also attempting to get out by the sea exit, were caught in the tide, and one of them, a young lady from Rathkeale, was unconscious when rescued by a gentleman named Hickey. On Thursday the funeral of Mr. O'Connell took place from the R. C. Church, Abbeydale, and was extremely large and representative of every class in the district. The town was closely shuttered, and there were many indications of the sincere sympathy entertained for the parents of the deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Connell, of Clash, and keen regret for his early and unexpected demise in the spring of life.

WEDDING AT NEWCASTLE WEST.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

A very interesting marriage ceremony took place at the R. C. Church, Newcastle West, on Tuesday, the bride being Miss Madge Hanley, only child of Mr. William Hanley, South Quay, and the bridegroom Mr. Eugene S. O'Mahony, organist, St. Patrick's Church, Cork, and youngest son of Mr. Matthew O'Mahony, the Square, Newcastle West. The bridesmaid was Miss A. Enright, and the best man Mr. J. Flanagan. The bridal party consisted of several friends who came to attend the ceremony from Dublin, Kerry, and quite a large number of local friends. The Right Rev. Monsignor Hallinan, P.P., officiated, assisted by Rev. F. Dwane, C.C. The bride wore a princess robe of rich seafoam, and carried a shower bouquet, the gift of the bridegroom. After the
