having such a duty being imposed on the police might, among other things, put them in an invidious position.

Mr. Hickson said the warrant was directed to the police, but it was the first time that he had seen where a warrant was ordered to be collected by instalments of a shilling a week.

District-Inspector O'Hara said the warrants were from a loan office, and it might lead to confusion, if allegations were made that an instalment was paid where it had not been paid.

Mr. Hickson said the magistrates would allow the warrant to stand, but make no order on it. In the other cases of the loan society decrees would be given.

TO OK A DROP TOO MUCH.

Michael Killeen, a rough and tumble looking countryman, was charged at the Police Court yesterday by Night Constable, Patrick Trehy, with being drunk that morning.

Killeen said his real name was Lyons, but his mother's name was Killeen, and that was the name he went by since his father's death. He took a drop too much when at a funeral. A nominal fine was imposed.
