THE LATE MR. J. COUNIHAN.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT).
Kilrush Board of Guardians on Saturday adjourned as a tribute of respect to the memory of the late Mr John Counihan.

The meeting of the Rural District Council was also adjourned for a like reason.
At Saturday's meeting of the Kilrush Urban Council, Mr. Batt Cullhan, J.P., in the chair, a resolution adjourning the Board as a mark of respect to the memory of the late lamented Mr. John Counihan, and condolence with Dr. John Counihan, J.P., and family in their bereavement, was unanimously adopted.

DEATH OF MR. D. CLANCY, CO. C

The death took place at his residence, Rutland, on Sunday night, of Mr. Daniel Clancy, after a rather brief illness. He ceased, who was never robust, was out as late as a fortnight ago, when he attended a meeting of the County Council, of which body he was a member. During last week he contracted a chill, and was obliged to keep in bed. Throughout Saturday his condition became worse, and on Sunday night he passed peacefully away. Mr. Clancy, who was a man of middle age, farmed a considerable number of acres at Roxboro', where he was eminently popular. He was for a number of years a member of the Poor Law Board, and on the advent of the Local Government Act was elected to the representation of the division in which he resided. He continued to hold office up to the time of his death, and, save by his own family, by none will his demise be more keenly felt than by his colleagues in the County Council.

THE CLARE HOUNDS.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT)
Ballycar Railway Station was the fixture on Tuesday. A strong wind blowing with terrible hail showers, yet scent was of the very best. The enlargement took place at the once famous fox covert of Rath, where many a large field met that veteran sportsman, the late Col. Augustine Butler, M.P.H.

We started at a good pace crossing the Rathlahine road near Mr. Russell's, and running parallel to the railway line soon found ourselves at Streamstown; here the stag wheeled to the right, crossing the railway bridge, ran a short distance on the road, then swinging to the left took us over a nice country towards Sixmile-bridge. Here hounds simply raced for fifteen minutes nearly into Rossmanagher; before reaching which there was a check, and soon our quarry came into view heading for Springfield, where a safe capture was effected in a pond at the back of the farm yard after a very smart 35 minutes.

On Friday hounds met at Kiltanen, where Captain and Mrs. Molony entertained. The deer was enlarged within half a mile of the front entrance. Hounds hunted on through Lissafin till reaching the Miltown river which pounded the field. Some time being lost here, we could never get on terms with the hounds till reaching Newgrove, where we finished up—time being a little under the hour.

Amongst those out were—Mr. William Hawkins Ball and Captain Standish O'Grady (joint masters), Lady Beatrice O'Brien, Lord Dunboyne, the Hon. Blanche Butler, Captain George H. P. Crowe, Mr. Robert O'B. Studdert, D.L., Captain and Mrs. Molony, Mrs. Keane, Mrs. Robert Hume Crowe, Mr. Kelly, Mr. Hewett, Mr. P. F. O'Halloran, Captain Brady-Browne (High Sheriff), Miss Maud Studdert, Miss Ethel Studdert, Mr. Wyndham Brady-Browne and Mr. James Butler levers.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MR. THOMAS ROBINSON

The remains of the late Mr. Thomas Robinson were removed from his late residence, 3, Nelson street, yesterday morning, at nine o'clock, to the Central Hall, Bedford Row, where the first portion of the funeral service was read. There was a large and representative attendance of the public desirous of paying a last mark of respect to the memory of an old and highly esteemed and unassuming citizen. The coffin was placed on a trestle beneath the dais, which was draped in black.

The chief mourners were—W. J. Robinson, LL.D., solicitor, Boyle, G. W. Robinson, L.P.S.I., Limerick, sons; Sir Thomas Robinson, Kingstown, and Morley Nelson, Limerick, nephews; Richard Smyth, Dublin, and Joseph Stewart, L.P.S.I., Limerick, sons-in-law; Standish Stewart, grandson of the deceased.

At the Central Hall, the hymn "There is a Land of Pure Delight" was sung. Rev. Mr. Gentleman read a portion of scripture and then delivered a very touching and impressive address in which he said that Thomas Robinson who had fallen asleep in Jesus was an earnest and humble believer in Him. He was a man of deep piety, of blameless life, and a child-like simplicity of disposition. He lived most of his 80 years in that city to which he came long before the majority of those present were born, and he left it—passing away from their midst for ever—with an unblemished character. Thank God for that, and that was why they "buried their dead with singing." With no feeling of doubt or uncertainty they spoke over his ashes—"In sure and certain hope of a glorious resurrection."

As the remains were being removed from the hearse the "Dead March in Saul" was played by Miss Switzer, organist of the Methodist Church.

The interment took place at the family burial place at St. Munchin's. Rev. B. E. Gentleman officiated, and Rev. T. B. Robertson pronounced the Benediction.

The Monster Drapery Houses, and many other business houses had their blinds drawn while the funeral was passing.
