

The Marchioness of Ormonde.

Lady Ormonde, who rarely misses the Cowes regatta week, was in former days a noted rider to hounds, and a daring horsewoman. She is a daughter of the late Duke of Westminster, and like all the Grosvenors, is devoted to open air life, riding, driving, and yachting. Much of her time is spent on the sea, the Marquis being the Commodore of the Royal Yacht Squadron. When in this country, Lord and Lady Ormonde reside at Kilkenny Castle. This ancient stronghold is one of the oldest inhabited houses in the British Isles, some of the rooms being almost exactly as they were seven or eight centuries ago.

Derivation of "Constable."

"Constabulary" and "constable," words that are specially prominent just now in connection with the Royal Irish Constabulary in Belfast, are curious instances of verbal ups-and-downs and indignity. Literally, "constable" ("comes stabuli") means only "stable attendant," but, with "chamberlain," "steward," and many other names of servants, it became exceedingly dignified when the service was Royal. The Constable of France and the Lord High Constable of England were very great men, and Scotland has still her Hereditary Lord High Constable in the Earl of Erroll. Nowadays, in ordinary speech, "constable" has dropped again to mean a policeman, "this lower constableness," as Blackstone quotes from Lambard, having been a derivative of the Lord High Constable's office, "and, as it were, a very finger of that hand." One can never tell where the word will finally arrive. "Policeman" and "politician" by origin both mean a man who looks after the affairs of the community.

THOUGHTS FOR TO-NIGHT AND TO-MORROW.

Harsh counsels have no effect; they are like hammers which are always repulsed by the anvil.

If you want to succeed in the world, you must make your own opportunities as you go on.

'Tis the will that makes the action good or ill.

NEWS-NOTES AND NOTIONS.

GRATEFUL MINISTER.

dignified is a reputation of having a swelled head. Don't begin to wonder how other people can afford so many things that you can't afford. That is a big step in the direction of growing envious and sour.

We have noticed that people who do exactly as they please, whether their friends like it or not, get along about as well as those who are always trying to please.
