

NOTES AND NOTIONS.

DOG WORSHIP.
 Understand lovers of dogs feeling a sympathy for their pets, bemoaning them when they die, going to the extent—as was the case in the Limerick—of burying the animal in a coffin with a canopy of flowers. But there is no recent limit to the extravagances. It is not without its humorous side, as is shown by the invitations to attend the funeral of a dog, and to take it out to a number of acquaintances. It is a good deal of carrying wreaths. They were invited to attend the funeral of a dog named "Lottie" was the man's name. When they found that it was only his dog, the sympathy was unutterable. When the dog was buried, the things were going to end.

WHAT REMINDS US
 An incident once made, which at the time was the most brutal thing we had ever heard of, probably not intended to be brutal, but the overweening affection for the dog was at a seaside resort, and a man lost his dear little child by death. The man sympathising with him, and among the owners of a particularly clever dog, a dog named "Lottie" was the man's name. When they found that it was only his dog, the sympathy was unutterable. When the dog was buried, the things were going to end.

CLIPPING THE FLEET.
 The Boat Club have added to their stock of motor outriggers of the latest type of motor. Now, probably, we may have a motor boat on in the Kiltrush Harbour. It is a late than never. It is stated that the Boat Club have lately put on some of the erstwhile famous regattas in

STILL THEY GO.
 On Friday week a number of boys were going to the town and rural districts, leaving Kiltrush left by train en route to the States. The usual distressing scenes met the youthful travellers and their parents ends at the railway platform.

THE LATE MRS. WYNNE.

Pulpit Reference.

Deep sympathy is expressed by a wide circle of friends with the Ven. Archdeacon Wynne and family on the death of Mrs. Wynne, which (as reported in our last issue) took place at the Rectory, Barrington street, on Saturday evening. Preaching at St. Michael's Church on Sunday morning, the Rev. C. S. Ellison, B.D., said it would not be right to refrain from saying a word on a subject which was occupying all their minds at that moment. Their sympathies had been called forth in no ordinary manner for a number of weeks past with Archdeacon Wynne, their Rector, in his hour of trial. Now they knew that a long struggle had come to an end, and Mrs. Wynne had been called to her eternal rest. Most of them present knew the deceased lady longer than he had done. At the same time their acquaintance in general with her had not been a long one. He often felt that it was after all a poor thing to keep their kind words till the end comes, but at the same time, on such an occasion as this they were not lost. Mrs. Wynne was a gentle and kindly Christian lady, and even when she was herself suffering severe pain, had a cheerful and gentle word for all she met or for all who met her. He felt certain the sympathy and prayers of the congregation went forth to Archdeacon Wynne and his family in their hour of sorrow and soreness of trial.

The hymns included "Peace, Perfect Peace," and a funeral march was played on the organ.

The Funeral

The funeral took place this morning from the Rectory, Barrington street, for the Railway Station, whence the remains were conveyed by the 8.15 train for Dublin, the interment taking place to-day at the family burial place at Whitechurch, Rathfarnham. Although announced to be private, there was a large attendance of the parishioners of St. Michael's, and many other friends to pay a last mark of respect to the memory of the deceased lady, and evince their sympathy with Archdeacon Wynne and family in their bereavement. The chief mourners were—Ven. Archdeacon Wynne (husband), Rev. Llewellyn Wynne (son), Mr. Edward Wynne (brother-in-law), and Rev. Horace Deane (son-in-law of the deceased). The clergy included—The Bishop, the Dean, Rev. C. S. Ellison, Rev. J. T. Waller, Rev. C. V. Atkinson, Rev. R. A. Adderley, Rev. G. Phair, etc.

LATE MR. M. J. DUNNE, K.C.

Tribute by Judge Adams.

At the opening of the Trinity Quarter Sessions for the city of Limerick yesterday, His Honor Judge Adams referred to the tragic boating disaster in Dublin Bay by which Mr. M. J. Dunne, K.C., and his nephew, lost their lives. The late Mr. Dunne, K.C., was well known and deeply respected in their ancient city. It was only two or three months ago in that court hence since he conducted the business

LIMERICK QUARTER SESSIONS.

WHITE GLOVES.

The Quarter Sessions for the City of Limerick were opened yesterday by his Honor Judge Adams, K.C.

Mr. Wm. M. Beauchamp, Clerk of the Peace, informed the Court that there was no Crown business for trial, and

The City High Sheriff (Mr. E. J. L.) presented his Honor with a pair of white gloves.

His Honor returned thanks, and congratulated them on the continued peace and good order in the city.

LICENSING APPEAL.

Mr. F. B. Ormsby, licensee of the refreshment rooms at Limerick, appealed against the decision of the magistrates fining him a breach of the Licensing Act on St. 31st March.

Mr. Phelps (instructed by Mr. B. Ba.) appeared for the appellant.

Mr. Leahy, Crown Solicitor, for the defendant.

The evidence of Constable O'Donnell had the effect that at 11.45 a.m. an excursion train arrived from Cork in connection with the match. There was a door-keeper in the refreshment room door. A man named Wilson, the doorman, put no question to the people. Some from the town went in; they were going to the same train to Nenagh. He saw a man named Hayes afterwards going into the bar, and drinking what appeared to be beer.

Mr. Phelps maintained the summons as they were summoned for being open on the arrival of the train, and open for people arriving. They did not say that Hayes went into the bar, and that business there, but he got no drink.

His Honor said it was plain the bar were lawfully open at the time, and the conviction be therefore upheld?

Mr. Leahy said there were five other persons summoned.

His Honor said he had only to look at the order book, and if he were to uphold the conviction his decision would be "certiorari" to be quashed by the Bench, and if he were there he would have no hesitation in quashing the summons should have been given giving drink to a person who had no business there—a non-bona fide traveller. The prohibition to keep the bar open on the departure of the train and if some one in and got drink amongst the bona fide travellers, that was another day's work. He understood the drastic character of that the conviction should be endorsed. A publichouse might require to be watched, but a refreshment room at
