HOW PINT POTS GO.

Publicans are constantly complaining of the disappearance of their pewter pots, and yesterday in the Police Court one valued at 3s 6d was found to have been bought for fourpence by Mary Ward, a marine store dealer, who though she admitted that she doubted the statement of Mary Corbett that she had found it on the street, still bought it, at which Mr. Holliday expressed his surprise. Corbett was let off under the First Offenders Act.

KILKEE WATERWORKS.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

The carrying out of the Kilkee waterworks, for one reason or another, is still delayed. The project has long since passed all its stages, the grant or loan of £4,000 has been obtained, and the first instalment of it lodged to the credit of the Council in the bank—bearing interest against them—and the contractors are ready to commence work in the morning, to use the words of the Clerk of the Council. Yet some unaccountable shilly-shallying keeps the work at a standstill.

ARRESTED ON SUSPICION

At the City Police Court to-day, John Flanagan was charged on suspicion with stealing a sledge-hammer. He was arrested by Constable McGrath, and discharged to be summoned.
