

of any infectious disease from them.

The room was cleared of the general public at 2.10, and the jury after an hour and a quarter's deliberation returned a verdict that deceased "died from cholera-nostris, due to meat poisoning, and we are further of opinion that at the time of cooking the unsoundness of the meat could not have been detected."

The Foreman said he had been asked by the jury to say how much they appreciated the manner in which he (the Coroner) had conducted that deplorable case. He was also asked to reiterate their acts of condolence with the nurse and relatives of the deceased passed at the outset of the inquest, and also to record their appreciation of the manner in which the Constabulary had conducted the case, notably District Inspector White, Head Constable Moore and Sergeant Wickham.

The Coroner said he agreed with what had been said by the foreman of the jury. The proceedings then closed.

have technical instruction in new energy. Mr. Winter said the Committee thought people would not be able to afford the cost of the day classes. Of course the demonstrations in the fields must be in the day time. Mr. Coleman—And you dispensed with winter classes altogether? The Chairman—Not altogether, but in winter. If the lectures were to go on in winter classes one man could never do the business. Mr. Coleman—That ends it.

DEPARTMENTAL GRANT.

With reference to the scheme of technical education adopted by the Committee, the Department wrote that the present grant would be continued only on condition that the local rate was maintained at a sum not less than £75.

The Chairman said that the letter was approved of the scheme formulated by the Committee.

Mr. Coleman asked if the Technical Education scheme was looked upon as a success by the Committee.

The Chairman assumed such was the case, but the Committee would not take the cost into consideration.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy asked was it not the case that they were spending out of capital £200,000 more than they were entitled to.

Mr. Hartigan said that was not so. The Chairman explained that formerly the grant was given for agriculture, and technical education, and the Department wanted to have the money taken back from the Agricultural Committee and given to the Department for technical education, as he had reduced the grant for agriculture to something like one-fifth of the original amount, £430.

In answer to Mr. O'Shaughnessy, Mr. Hartigan said the money expended on technical education was from the fund set aside for the purpose.

POULTRY INSTRUCTRESS.

Miss Campbell, recently appointed poultry instructress, wrote that she would be glad to undertake the duties forthwith.

Arising out of the consideration of the scheme,

Mr. Coleman suggested that a premium of 30s per acre should be given to small farmers for £40 valuation and under, to encourage the promotion of tillage. The premium would be given for an excess acre laid down to tillage, and according to a scale to be agreed upon. Until tillage was taken up more generally throughout the county that it was at present they would never have any real prosperity.

In answer to the Chairman, Mr. Wybberly, County Agricultural Inspector, said he had presently 80 demonstration plots under supervision, and they could have more experimental plots. The great difficulty was to get people to take them up.

The Chairman thought they would find it difficult to supervise the tillage men, but Mr. Coleman.

Mr. Wybberly thought the supervision would not be so difficult as supposed. It would be difficult.

After some conversation the matter was referred to a sub-committee.
