

There was blood oozing from the wound, the bed-clothes were smeared by the fluid, the floor. He left the house, and subsequently met with Dr. Hayes, when they probed the wound, which they found to be three inches deep. Evening they made a post mortem, the details of which would be related by Dr. Hayes.

Magner—Would you think it was in fact she died the wound?

Magner—I could not tell you, but she must have been bleeding for some time before she expired.

Magner—What do you think caused the wound?

Magner—It must have been caused by a sharp instrument.

Thomas Hayes submitted the result of the post mortem examination, which showed that death was due to hemorrhage consequent on a punctured wound of the vulva.

Magner—Was that wound caused by a sharp instrument?

Hayes—Yes, it must have been caused by a sharp instrument.

Inspector Swanzy—Driven with considerable force?

Hayes—Of course.

The jury closed the evidence, and the jury returned the following verdict:—"We find that the said Margaret Gammell died from hemorrhage on the 14th January instant, due to a wound of the vulva."

The Master said the great complaint of the auditor was wholly in connection with the paying register, and as it consisted of arrears which were accumulating and were in the most part irrecoverable, he had to ask the Guardians to look into the matter at once and wipe out the accounts that could not be recovered. That would end the trouble.

After a lengthened discussion on the auditor's report, the whole matter of the paying patients' register was referred to the next meeting of the Visiting Committee.
