GERMAN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION.

Berlin, Wednesday.

At a meeting of the Berlin School of Medicine to-night, Dr. Franz Friedmann announced the discovery of a cure for all forms of tuberculosis, including intercolitis of the lungs and bones, and lupus. 682 patients, he said, had been treated with the remedy, including 250 consumptives, and the result had been so favourable that Dr. Friedmann claims practically a hundred per cent. cures.

A number of prominent physicians testified to the success of the remedy from their own experience.

The nature of Dr. Friedmann's specific is withheld, but it consists of a preparation of living non-virulent bacilli administered by subcutaneous intravenous injection.

Over a thousand human beings have been inoculated without the least harmful results.

The bacillus employed is tuberculosis bacillus rendered innocuous.

BREAKING WINDOWS.

Suffragists Fined.

London, Wednesday.

At Bow street to-day, Margaret Smith, married, and Elizabeth Gordon, no occupation, both of Acton, were convicted of breaking two windows at the National Health Insurance Commission Offices, in Buckingham Gate, yesterday, and each defendant was ordered to pay a fine of twenty shillings and £2, the amount of damage, or undergo fourteen days' imprisonment in the second division.

Mrs. Smith said her action was a protest against the Government's attitude on women's franchise.

is given to Ireland, the Unionist Party when assuming office would give it a fair trial, and dismisses the threatened cry of a revolt in Ulster as absurd. A condition of his support of the Bill, however, is that Ulster should not be coerced, at least until the electorate have had an opportunity of giving their verdict upon the issue.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMERICK.

"The Dust of Egypt,"

There lived some three thousand years ago a beautiful young princess by name Amenset, in ancient Egypt, who was one day being entertained by her slave girls on the terrace of her father's palace in Thebes, when a wise man from the desert desired to see her. She had heard about him and he is at once brought before her. He gives her a wonderful Love Potion, very fashionable in those days, and also a wonderful magic draught which anyone drinking will live in the future. She snuck against the wishes of her friends at once drinks this to fall apparently dead at their feet. But the charm really has the virtues attributed to it and having lived as a mummy for a few thousand years she suddenly revives to her own astonishment and the still greater surprise of Geoffrey Lascelles, who had the mummy in his charge while on its way to the British Museum. Now it is one thing to have a mummy in one's rooms, even if it is the mummy of a lady of high degree, and the fact would not cause the most jealous young lady any doubt of her betrothed, but the presence of a most charming lady, clad in a most ravishing Eastern dress, certainly would, and so thought poor Geoffrey, and to make matters more embarrassing this same charming young lady at once claims him for her lord and master, for her ideas are, of course, those of long ago. When Geoff has recovered from the astonishment of the sudden presence of this lady he realises that the mummy is gone, and who will believe his tale. The lady declines to leave, so in self-protection he takes her away to his people's place in the country but here her presence is most upsetting, and after a series of the most laughable adventures he steals a motor car and takes her back to London. Here she remembers the Love Potion of ancient days, and to see if it still has its power she gives it to Geoff in his whiskey, and he at once falls in love with her. But there is a condition of return to life and that is that she must never kiss and unfortunately the Love Potion causes them to with the most surprising result which we cannot state here but advise all to go to the Theatre, and see for themselves for this is a slight outline of that most amusing play which is coming from Wyndham's Theatre, London, direct to the Theatre Royal, Limerick, for the whole of next week. The company which is performing this most amusing farcical comedy is headed by that most charming and clever young actress, Miss Jessica Waters, who is playing the "preserved lady" Princess Amenset, and the well known comedian, Mr. Arthur Poole, who is playing Mr. Gerald Du Maurier's part of Geoffrey Lascelles. They are supported by Messrs. Thomas Sidney, Cyril Percy, C. Smith, and Martin Sands, Misses Una Gilbert, and Hilda Plowright, amongst others. The play has the additional advantage of the scenery and dresses from Wyndham's Theatre, London. The box office is now open and we advise all playgoers to book their seats.

Mr. Daniel Croke-O'Brien, sub-agent of the Munster and Leinster Bank branch at Nenagh, has been promoted to the managership of the new branch at Roscrea. Mr. O'Brien is a Limerick man, and is very popular in Nenagh. He is to be succeeded in Nenagh by Mr. Evans, of Castleownbere.
