

private meet-
t, presided
to consider the members
for the Prime

SPEECH

received with on rising
the Home Rule
voted the Bill
of its sound-carried as prospect in the Rule was in Ireland an
There were That must unionists of the ent, and by ent for Ulster.
et the Ulster
oads. First,
; second, to Bill, with Ulster county
e themselves revert to the road explored
ts and Home
l exclusion a
had decided v the Ulster
they desired
could be ex-
tary electors.
quisition of three months
The period of om the first Belfast and separate conn-
All statutory ed to poll on in favour of ars from the
of the Irish
for exclusion
cept with the whole of the
he Bill came eting of the ed within a nt Parliament
ember, 1915.
t would come
would come s the Impe-wise. Mr.
— His pros the price
ered a free state, could sent of the

overnment pro-ord, then the . Unionists
n or without the Opposition not going to Government
time limit,
sals could be submit their
y a General

mb
om

AT ASSIZES
this morn-
G. S. and W. cision of the James Dini-
es and costs,
ants' servant
or whereby 1913. Mr J
Messrs J H
ared for the strusted by eared for the

His Lordship said there were other incidents mentioned in the depositions not contradicted or denied. They were inconsistent with the characters given by Mr. Atkinson and the Parish Priest. For two years O'Regan would not recognise him to be a person to be spoken to. It was a grave case. The prisoner flung a piece of lead piping at O'Regan, he brought that lead piping in his hip pocket, as there was evidence to prove that it was seen there before the row took place. Prisoner struck O'Regan with the lead piping, causing him concussion on the head, and then stabbed O'Regan in the leg, inflicting a wound seven inches long. When Reidy interfered and struck prisoner, the latter stabbed him in the chest and abdomen, and in consequence the intestines protruded. Reidy's life had been in danger, but he was now out of danger, but that was due to the mercy of God, and not to any forbearance on the part of the prisoner. Reidy was now a broken man, and would never be the same again as before the occurrence. He could not, therefore, acquit the prisoner of pre-meditation on the evidence, which he should take as fair and worthy. Before the prisoner came into the publichouse he was intended to injure O'Regan, as O'Regan did not speak to him for two years previous owing to an act of gross indecency alleged against him (the prisoner). There was no doubt that the prisoner was drunk on the occasion, but afterwards, when he was sober, he said: "A good man would beat the whole lot of the Ballinarougha fellows, and he would do it. He was sorry for Reidy but not for O'Regan." That was said by the prisoner when he was sober. Concluding, his lordship said attention was now riveted on the prisoner at the bar, but his lordship's mind was directed towards Reidy and O'Regan and, taking all the circumstances into consideration, and for the sake of the peace of the county, he could not give a sentence of less than four years penal servitude, the sentences to run concurrently in both cases.

Timothy Scanlan, Rathkeale, who pleaded guilty to an assault on his father, Patrick Scanlan, on 26th December, 1913, was next put forward for sentence.

The prisoner was given a good character by Mr. P. T. Liston, solicitor, Rathkeale.

The prisoner said he had some drink taken when he assaulted his father; his father was assaulting his mother, and he (prisoner) went into the house to separate them; he did not intend to strike his father with the bottle which went out of his hand and struck his father.

Constable Byrne said the family were always living on bad terms.

His Lordship said he could not give the prisoner less than a year's imprisonment to run from the date of his committal.

Daniel O'Connell and Michael Dennehy were put forward for sentence, they having pleaded guilty to a charge of assault on a farmer named Michael O'Gorman on the 25th January, 1914.

Mr. O'Connor, B.L., said the prisoners took O'Gorman out for a drive on a car, and gave him 2s to buy them a dozen of stout, which they intended to drink. They did not get the dozen of stout, and O'Gorman converted the 2s to his own use. The parties got into a wrangle and assaulted him. In the count of robbery of a watch and guard the Crown had entered a volle prossequi.

His Lordship—Was he badly assaulted?

Mr. O'Connor—No, my lord; he only got a black eye.

His Lordship—How long have they been in jail?

Mr. Beauchamp, Clerk of the Crown and Peace—Since the 27th January.

Mr. Fleming, K.C., stated that Dennehy got six months in connection with a manslaughter charge in 1912, and at Kanturk Petty Sessions he was sentenced to a month's imprisonment for threatening language.

His Lordship said there was a kind of justification in human nature but not in law in assaulting O'Gorman, and he would sentence them to two months imprisonment each to run from the date of committal 27th January.

James O'Donnell who was found guilty of firing at one Thomas M'Namara, Ballycushen, an old man, was next put forward.

His Lordship said it was a serious thing to shoot at persons with intent to frighten them as it might hit. It had been decided by a full court of Judges in Ireland that to go about carrying arms for the purpose of terrorising people was an offence in itself. His Lordship said he would act on the recommendation of mercy of the jury, and would sentence the prisoner to two months' imprisonment.

they live months, and he was not in good health.

His Lordship said there were other incidents mentioned in the depositions not contradicted or denied. They were inconsistent with the characters given by Mr. Atkinson and the Parish Priest. For two years O'Regan would not recognise him to be a person to be spoken to. It was a grave case. The prisoner flung a piece of lead piping at O'Regan, he brought that lead piping in his hip pocket, as there was evidence to prove that it was seen there before the row took place. Prisoner struck O'Regan with the lead piping, causing him concussion on the head, and then stabbed O'Regan in the leg, inflicting a wound seven inches long. When Reidy interfered and struck prisoner, the latter stabbed him in the chest and abdomen, and in consequence the intestines protruded. Reidy's life had been in danger, but he was now out of danger, but that was due to the mercy of God, and not to any forbearance on the part of the prisoner. Reidy was now a broken man, and would never be the same again as before the occurrence. He could not, therefore, acquit the prisoner of pre-meditation on the evidence, which he should take as fair and worthy. Before the prisoner came into the publichouse he was intended to injure O'Regan, as O'Regan did not speak to him for two years previous owing to an act of gross indecency alleged against him (the prisoner). There was no doubt that the prisoner was drunk on the occasion, but afterwards, when he was sober, he said: "A good man would beat the whole lot of the Ballinarougha fellows, and he would do it. He was sorry for Reidy but not for O'Regan." That was said by the prisoner when he was sober. Concluding, his lordship said attention was now riveted on the prisoner at the bar, but his lordship's mind was directed towards Reidy and O'Regan and, taking all the circumstances into consideration, and for the sake of the peace of the county, he could not give a sentence of less than four years penal servitude, the sentences to run concurrently in both cases.

Timothy Scanlan, Rathkeale, who pleaded guilty to an assault on his father, Patrick Scanlan, on 26th December, 1913, was next put forward for sentence.

The prisoner was given a good character by Mr. P. T. Liston, solicitor, Rathkeale.

The prisoner said he had some drink taken when he assaulted his father; his father was assaulting his mother, and he (prisoner) went into the house to separate them; he did not intend to strike his father with the bottle which went out of his hand and struck his father.

Constable Byrne said the family were always living on bad terms.

His Lordship said he could not give the prisoner less than a year's imprisonment to run from the date of his committal.

Daniel O'Connell and Michael Dennehy were put forward for sentence, they having pleaded guilty to a charge of assault on a farmer named Michael O'Gorman on the 25th January, 1914.

Mr. O'Connor, B.L., said the prisoners took O'Gorman out for a drive on a car, and gave him 2s to buy them a dozen of stout, which they intended to drink. They did not get the dozen of stout, and O'Gorman converted the 2s to his own use. The parties got into a wrangle and assaulted him. In the count of robbery of a watch and guard the Crown had entered a volle prossequi.

His Lordship—Was he badly assaulted?

Mr. O'Connor—No, my lord; he only got a black eye.

His Lordship—How long have they been in jail?

Mr. Beauchamp, Clerk of the Crown and Peace—Since the 27th January.

Mr. Fleming, K.C., stated that Dennehy got six months in connection with a manslaughter charge in 1912, and at Kanturk Petty Sessions he was sentenced to a month's imprisonment for threatening language.

His Lordship said there was a kind of justification in human nature but not in law in assaulting O'Gorman, and he would sentence them to two months imprisonment each to run from the date of committal 27th January.

James O'Donnell who was found guilty of firing at one Thomas M'Namara, Ballycushen, an old man, was next put forward.

His Lordship said it was a serious thing to shoot at persons with intent to frighten them as it might hit. It had been decided by a full court of Judges in Ireland that to go about carrying arms for the purpose of terrorising people was an offence in itself. His Lordship said he would act on the recommendation of mercy of the jury, and would sentence the prisoner to two months' imprisonment.

the driver he told me that she took it.

Mr. St George—How do you identify the barrel?

Complainant—It is like an ice barrel; she is only drawing the water temporarily; I asked her for the barrel and she admitted that she had it and that she would not give it.

To Mr. St. George—She has a barrel at the quarry and is using it herself.

Cross-examined by defendant—Have I the barrel since November? Since December, and it was I lent it to you then; witness, continuing, detailed the further history of the barrels.

Mr. St. George (to defendant)—By what right did you take the barrel? She told me to go and take one of the barrels.

Have you a right to it? I gave it to her husband last Friday.

Complainant was understood to say that she did not get it.

Mr. St. George—Where is the barrel belonging to the County Council?

Defendant made a statement, from which it was inferred that the County Council told her to take the barrel, that it was idle.

Mr. Power—If Mrs. Enright promises to give the barrel to the engine driver—

Mrs. Enright said it was at the quarry.

Complainant—Are not you using it?

Defendant said she was not.

The case was adjourned.

The personal recognisance of John Ryan, entered into about nine months ago for £2, was estreated in the sum of 10s. He had been fined at the previous Court.

The Late Mr. Coffey

TIPPERARY GUARDIANS SYMPATHY.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

At Saturday's meeting of the Tipperary Board of Guardians Mr. Thomas O'Dwyer, Chairman, presided. Sympathetic reference to the tragic death of the late Mr. John Coffey, Local Government Inspector, was made by Mr. James J. Fitzgerald, who said that Mr. Coffey was born at Ballinard, some four miles from town. He proposed a resolution tendering sympathy to Mr. Coffey's relatives in their sad bereavement.

Mr. Wm. McCormack seconded, and paid a tribute to the deceased.

The Clerk spoke in fitting terms of Mr. Coffey's worth, and expressed his respectful sympathy.

The resolution was unanimously adopted in silence.

REGRET AT KILMALLOCK.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

The announcement of the tragic death of Mr. John Coffey, Local Government Inspector, caused a great shock, and evoked the deepest feelings of regret in the Blarney and Kilmallock districts, where he was well known, and held in the highest esteem. Mr. Coffey had been teacher in the Grange National School for a number of years, and his promotion to other spheres of public service was watched with interest and satisfaction by his many friends and the teachers generally, by whom he was remembered with sentiments of the warmest regard.

Indeed the same feelings would be entertained towards him by anyone who had the pleasure of his acquaintance and the opportunity of appreciating the many excellent qualities of such a gentle personality. About 10 years ago he held a Labourers' Inquiry at Kilmallock and though he was not in a position to recommend as many cottages and allotments as he would wish, owing to the funds being limited at the time he gave evidence of administrative capacity and a desire to uplift the workers.

Doctor and Guardians

West Limerick Appeal

CASE AT THE ASSIZES.

At the Limerick Spring Assizes, before Lord Chief Baron Palles, Dr. Philip McGrath, Athlone, was respondent in an appeal by the Guardians of the Poor of Newcastle West Union from a decree of the County Court Judge for £25 13s for professional services rendered.

The plaintiff's case was that he was engaged by the defendants from the 27th March to the 23rd May last year attending to the maternity cases in Dr. Ambrose's dispensary district while he was attending to fever patients, for

GARRYOWEN v. CONSTITUTION

At the Mardyke Grounds, Cork, on Saturday last, the above teams met and played their tie in the Munster Cup. The match was fought out in a stubborn manner, roughness being a feature of the play, and when time was called the scoring sheet was blank. It is expected the re-play will take place in Limerick on St. Patrick's Day.

POPULAR LECTURES

ILLUSTRATED NATURAL HISTORY LECTURE.

Mr. Radcliffe Dugmore, F.R.G.S., one of the pioneers of that novel and fascinating sport which makes use of the camera instead of the rifle in the hunting of big game, is to give his entrancingly delightful lecture—"Stalking Big Game with a Camera"—at the Gaiety Theatre, on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Dugmore describes the character and aims of the expedition which he successfully led into British East Africa, gives an interesting account of its personnel and equipment, and tells of the numerous obstacles with which it had to contend. A description of the various marches accomplished is illustrated with a series of beautiful coloured views, and thus the hearer gets an excellent idea of the country in which Mr. Dugmore met with so many thrilling adventures and secured a large number of unique pictures of animal life. He narrates the story of his hairbreadth escapes in a modest way, and pays tribute to the faithful services of his trusty companion and friend. His audiences are always fascinated by the recital of events in connection with the photographing of charging rhinoceroses and lions prowling at night. Several incidents that occurred when only a few feet saved Mr. Dugmore and his apparatus from destruction serve to show the many risks of stalking big game with a camera. The illustrations are remarkably life-like; indeed, so intensely realistic are the pictures, one almost fears that the lions and rhinoceroses will start from the sheet. To see the lion in captivity is to get but little idea of this majestic animal as he roves with perfect freedom in the primeval forest. His spirit is broken by confinement, and he loses much of his royal dignity as the king of beasts. In Mr. Dugmore's pictures we see the lion who knew nothing of captivity, who has lived as his forefathers lived. We see him amidst his natural surroundings, following his inclinations, and we have the satisfaction of knowing that, although we have made his acquaintance, it was not necessary that he should be slain or made captive for us to do so, as Mr. Dugmore never uses firearms unless his own life is in danger. Such an attractive lecture—the last in the present series of popular lectures—should bring together a very large audience. Rev. T. F. Abbott, B.D., will preside, and front seats may be booked at McCarthy's music warehouse.

MARKET INTELLIGENCE

LIMERICK MARKETS—MARCH 7.

BREADSTUFFS—Retail patents, 8s 6d per sack; Bakers' patents, 8s 6d per sack; Specials, 3s 6d per do; Wholemeal, 3s 6d per do; Oatmeal, 3s 6d per do; Oaten Flake Meal, 1s 6d per cwt; W. Bran, £7 0s per ton; Special Bran, £6 0s per do; W. Pollard, 2s 10s per do; Indian Meal (coarse), £6 10s per do; Indian Meal (fine), £7 0s per do; Barley Meal, £8 10s per do.

HAY AND STRAW—There were 42 loads of hay and 3 loads of oaten straw in market. Rye hay, 5s 6d to 6s 0d per ton; upland, 4s to 5s 6d per ton; corncass, 3s 6d to 3s 10d per ton; oaten straw, 3s 6d per ton.

CORN—There was a small supply of white oats (R), from 10s 6d to 10s 10d per stone; black oats, 9s 6d to 10s 6d per stone.

FISH—Whiting, 6d per lb; herrings, 1s 6d per doz; codfish, 8d per lb; haddock, 6d per lb; flaneys, 6d per lb; bale, 8d per lb; 1s 6d per lb; sole, 1s 6d per lb; plaice, 8d per lb; turbot, 1s 8d per lb; halibut, 1s per lb; lemon sole, 10s per lb; brill, 1s per lb; whitebait, 6d per lb; lobsters, 6d per lb.

MEAT—Roasting beef, 10d per lb; steaks, 10d per lb; hind quarters of mutton, 7d per lb; fore quarters of mutton, 7d per lb; boiling beef, 7d per lb; corned beef, 7d per lb; corned mutton, 7d per lb.

Eggs—Hen eggs, 1s 0d to 1s 2d per dozen; duck eggs, 1s 1d to 1s 2d per dozen.

MEATCOUSE—20 lbs, 1s 10d to 1s 12d per dozen.