There is good reason for supposing that the Government contemplate reconstitution of the second chamber on these lines, for anything less drastic would not command the support of the advanced Radicals and Labour men who advocate single chamber Government. At the same time it is clear that the Government are merely out to do a little window-dressing, seeing that the Prime Minister has now declared that the House of Lords proposals are not to be incorporated in a Bill for this session. Presumably Ministers will hold their Bill in reserve so as to go to the country again on the People " cry.

CLARE MURDER CHARGE.

Proposal to Enlarge the Panel.

In the King's Bench Division yesterday, before the Lord Chief Justice, an application was made on behalf of the Crown in the case of the King v. Patrick Ryan and Patrick Hegarty, whose re-trial on the charge of having murdered one John Kildea on the 30th November last, had been fixed for next Thursday. The prisoners, who had been brought up from Limerick Jail, were in Court.

Mr Rearden (for the Attorney-General), applied for an order of the Court, directing the Sheriff to increase the jury panel by 200 names, in order to secure a full attendance of jurors at the opening of the trial. He pointed out that in the interests of justice, and taking into account the number of jurors who might be challenged for the prisoners or ordered to "stand by" it would be necessary to increase the complement to the extent he had mentioned.

Mr P Lynch, K.C, who with Mr M Kenny, represents the accused men, resisted the motion, on the ground that it would be unfair to the prisoners, and be calculated to prejudice a fair trial if such an application were granted. The panel already summoned was ample and sufficient.

Mr Philip White intervened on behalf of the Sheriff, and asked if his lordship granted the application that reasonable time be given to prepare the panel, and issue notice to the jurors.

The Lord Chief Justice said that the application was of a rather novel character. There was no recent precedent for it to enlarge the panel by 200 names after the panel had been struck, and there had been an abortive trial. The application was strongly opposed by counsel for the prisoners and he was constrained to refuse the motion. Of course at trial, at which he would preside himself, if the occasion arose it might be necessary to consider the enlargement of the panel.

LOCAL ENTERPRISE.

Messrs John Laird and Company.

It is always a pleasure to us to refer to local enterprise, and the latest is associated with the old established firm of Messrs John Laird and Company, Pharmaceutical Chemists and Druggists, George Street, where extensive alterations and renovations are going on the point of completion. The old-fashioned shop front which was in existence for a long spell of years has completely disappeared, and in its stead is a design after a most approved city style, bright and ornate in the highest degree, and a credit to the important and thoroughfare where the firm is so centrally situated. The visitor will, perhaps, first of all be attracted by the handsome plate glass windows in gun-metal panels, and resting on a black marble base, while there is a Parnquite floor on which portion of the fancy goods are displayed, and here it may be remarked that there is a variety of useful and ornamental "free gifts," which have been inaugurated for distribution next week, the opening week of the establishment in its new garb. The windows are set off with fancy drapery and artificial floral decorations, the latter being supplied by Messrs Lever Brothers, and are part of the decorations which were in being during the recent visit of the King and Queen to Port Sunlight. The spacious entrance to the shop itself is laid down in mosaic, with a white marble border, the name "Laird and Co.," being in the centre. The soffit, or the under part of the entablature, is set off with several reflecting mirrors in a mahogany frame, and the lacia contains the title "Laird & Co., Cash Chemists," inlaid in gold lettering. The pilasters and console blocks are of massive mahogany carving, and without going into further details, it is sufficient to say that the frontage of the concern is as up-to-date and artistic in general effect as could be found in any city. The same can be said of the interior arrangements, where many extensive alterations have been made, notably the removal of the partition wall dividing the hall from the shop, and thus giving much needed additional room for the carrying on of a steadily increasing business. In the various departments handsome fittings, thoroughly modern in finish and design, have been installed, and one cannot fail to notice the very handsome ceiling in steel panels, enamelled in white. It is unnecessary for us to elaborate the various sections of the concern, but one point we may be alluded to. A portion of the shop is given over to the Photographic Department which has been largely extended, and special attention will be given to the printing and development of amateurs' work. Another very interesting feature is the new Toilette Department, where everything pertaining to ladies' and gentlemen's requisites may be had. The dispensing business hitherto carried on in the shop is now being conducted upstairs under the charge of a qualified chemist, and thus much more room is provided for the immediate despatch of orders appertaining to this important section of Messrs Laird's trade. We have thus alluded briefly to the improvements they have made the establishment one of the most commodious and up-to-date concerns of the kind in the country, and the firm are to be heartily congratulated on the enterprise and business instincts which prompted it to carry them out. The alterations, structural and the like, have been some four months in course of construction, and they have been carried out by Messrs J. Ryan and Sons, Builders, Thomas Street, on whom the works reflect the highest credit, as well as on the architect, Mr Clifford Smith, C.E. All local labour was employed at the work.

MUSICAL EXAMINATIONS.

In the recent school examinations of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music, and the Royal College of Music, the following pupils of Miss Cecilia Elliott, L.R.A.M., 7 Pery Square, were successful:—Kathleen M Lauder, lower division, pass, piano. Ethel B Hayes, Cyril B Hayes, and Adrian B Hayes, primary division, pass, violin.—

Ellen McGrath, pupil of Mr Frank Musgratt, Henry-street, Limerick, higher division, distinction, piano.

IRISH TRANSPORT WORKERS' UNION.

Reported Resignation of Mr James Larkin.

It is stated that Mr James Larkin has resigned his position as Secretary and Organiser of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, and proposes to leave Dublin. No information about the matter could be obtained on inquiring last night at Liberty Hall, the headquarters of the organisation. A notice, however, was posted in the hall last evening informing the members of the Union that a special meeting will be held in Croydon Park on Sunday.

THEATRE ROYAL

Large audiences enjoy the bill of fare submitted by Mr. Alexander Marsh and his excellent company at the Theatre Royal. Thursday night there was a very fine production of Clifford Rean's romantic play, "Nell Gwynne." Last night "The Tempest" was also very popular, and to-night "David Garrick" and "The Sleigh Bells" will be placed on the boards. We publish in our advertising columns next week's very attractive programme, which should draw crowded houses. On Monday "The Ticket of Leave Man" will be performed, and on Tuesday "The Three Musketeers."

A meeting of the County Committee of Agricultural and Technical Instruction will be held next Wednesday at 11 o'clock to elect a Chairman and Vice-Chairman for 1914-15, and to transact a variety of general business.

Favourable weather was associated with the Fete which opened yesterday in Belfield in aid of the Organ Fund of St. Mary's Cathedral. There was bright sunshine, tempered by a gentle breeze, when the carnival opened at one o'clock, and two hours later Lady Fermoy performed the opening ceremony, which was quite formal. The attendance was in large numbers, fashionable, and every one present took a lively interest in the proceedings. Belfield, which was kindly placed at the disposal of the promoters by Mrs Ievers, is pleasantly situated, and yesterday afternoon it presented a very pretty appearance. In addition to the beauty of its natural attractions, it was becomingly decorated with flags and bunting, and a variety of devices were utilized to give a festive aspect to a fetching background. During the evening the Fete was visited by large numbers of the citizens, who were impressed by the scheme of decoration employed. At night there was again a large gathering, and the stalls, which were numerous, did a brisk trade. Certainly nothing was left undone by the stallholders and their assistants to part with their wares which were varied and set off to the best advantage. A big round of amusement was provided, the concerts were highly accomplished, and the wax work hall, hoop-la, and other attractions, were well patronised. The opening day was a great success, and when the fete closes to-night, the worthy object for which it was promoted should be handsomely resulted. An attractive feature of the Carnival were the musical programmes supplied by the Band of the York and Lancaster Regiment, under the conductorship of Mr A. Mining. The general programme was an artistic piece of work, and reflected credit on the printer, Mr A. J. Eakins.

THE LATE CANON A. MURPHY, P.P., V.G.

The Funeral.

The funeral of the late Very Rev. Canon Andrew Murphy, P.P., V.G., took place from St. John's Cathedral at noon to-day, and the occasion may be said to have moved the entire population of the city to show how deeply stirred they were by the death of a good and notable clergyman. The remains, enclosed in a richly mounted oak coffin, were removed last evening from the parochial residence, North Strand, and the cortege which followed the hearse was a large and representative one of every class of the community. At the Cathedral, which was fittingly draped, the coffin was placed on a catafalque before the High Altar, and there they were rested awaiting the Office and Requiem Mass, which was solemnized at half-past ten o'clock to-day in presence of a congregation which filled every available space in the sacred edifice.

His Lordship the Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer presided, and the assistant priests at the Throne were Rev Fr Murphy, Adm., St John's, and Rev Fr MoNamara, C.C, do. At the close of the Mass His Lordship ascended the pulpit, and addressed the congregation. Speaking with emotion he said some expressions, however inadequate, was due from him at the sorrow which lay so heavily on their hearts that day. They had lost an old friend—a citizen of great power and distinction, whose name was known and honoured in the city and country. For twenty-nine years Canon Murphy laboured in the city, and during all that time steadily and confidently he rose in the esteem and respect, his Lordship might say in the admiration of his fellow-citizens. But without any distinction whatsoever, they were proud of his commanding abilities and of his splendid eloquence, and honoured him for the elevation and dignity of his own personal character. In secular affairs, on public boards and committees, and with other matters in which he was engaged, everyone found it a pleasure to be connected with him. He was so gentle in his manner, so calm and judicious in temperament, and possessed such an insight into things that he was able to grasp the details of almost every subject that he had to deal with, and made everyone have the most absolute confidence in his judgment. From every class of the community, from people of every shade of religion without any distinction whatsoever, the estimate of his worth was acknowledged. The warm sympathy and anxiety during his illness came from all quarters, and from none more warmly or generously than from their Protestant fellow-citizens, to whom from that pulpit his lordship wished to express his own deep personal gratitude, and the gratitude of the priests and Catholic people of Limerick. At one time it seemed Murphy's loss more deeply or sorely felt than by his own poor people—the parishioners of St. Munchin's. During the few years that he was their Parish Priest he won his way to their hearts and they thanked God for the good and help they placed over them. He was a man that allowed nothing, no matter how absorbing it might have been, to interfere with his priestly duties. He was the good shepherd—he knew his own and his own knew him. Canon Murphy was a priest to his finger-tips. His people, his own parishioners were his own kith and kin. He loved them and made their interests his own, and in turn they gave him a place in their hearts that will never be effaced. As Vicar General of the Diocese he was brought into relation with all the clergy in the diocese—secular and regular—and in the discharge of that responsible office every priest that had to deal with him would say that nothing could exceed his administrative abilities. On education and everything connected with it he was a recognised authority, and on account of his great distinction he was appointed a Senator of the National University of Ireland. It was only a few weeks ago that his lordship received from the Chancellor of that University, his Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, a most generous, a most touching testimony of the singular power with which Canon Murphy discharged that office. Having alluded to Canon Murphy's connection with the Irish Clerical Head Masters' Association, Dr O'Dwyer said since his consecration as Bishop he had been associated with the deceased clergyman in the closest and most intimate manner. He was his lordship's first secretary, and then he appointed him teacher in the Seminary, and after a few years he became its President. Then he became Administrator of the Cathedral Church, and afterwards parish priest of St Munchin's, and Vicar General of the Diocese. As he grew in knowledge he displayed a greater wealth of the power of the gifts with which God had endowed him. Above all, he displayed a humility and simplicity that put him at the beck and call of everyone until he literally wore himself out. To him he gave loyalty and affection that were the greatest happiness of his life, and now when advancing years and infirmity made it necessary for him to rely more than ever on his help, it had pleased God in His mysterious providence to take him away, he to whom his Lordship looked forward to be his prop and comfort in his old age. He loved him as a father loved his son and watched him in the development year after year of his great powers. In conclusion his lordship said he was with Canon Murphy before he died, and during his last illness he showed a great example of Christian and priestly virtue. Now that he had gone they would not forget him. They would pray for him, and hope that light eternal would shine on him.

The procession was then formed, the clergy and acolytes preceding the coffin, which was removed from the Cathedral to the solemn strains of Chopin's funeral march played on the organ. When the remains were placed in the hearse, the clergy walked in front his Lordship the Bishop taking his place in his carriage immediately preceding the bier. The cortege, which was of immense proportions, wended its way through Cathedral Place, William street, Sarsfield street across Sarsfield Bridge, along the Quay, Sarsfield Street to St Munchin's Church, where the interment took place. Along the whole route the greatest mark of respect was shown for the dead clergyman. Nearly every house was closed while procession passed, blinds were drawn in many windows, and the large crowds on the sidewalks, displayed the deepest reverence. It was a striking demonstration of sorrow on the part of the citizens of every shade of opinion at the death of a brilliant and devoted ecclesiastic.

The chief mourners were—Rev J Murphy, O.S.A, brother; Mrs M Murphy, sister; Martin Fitzgerald and Patrick Power (Ciaccastle), brothers-in-law; Martin Fitzgerald, junior, and Frank Fitzgerald, nephews; Miss Fitzgerald, Mrs Conran, and Miss M Fitzgerald, nieces; Professor Conran (University College, Cork), Professor Molohan (do.), and Patrick Carmody (Ennis), cousins; Mr and Mrs T Ellis.

LARCENY OF COAL.

William Moloney and Michael Kinnane, charged with the larceny of a ton of coal, the property of Messrs P. and D. McInerney, Ennis, from the quay at Clare Castle, were brought up on remand.

District Inspector Townsend, prosecuted.

Mr. J. B. Lynch, solicitor, was for the defence.

The evidence was that while Sergeant Brady and Constable Power were on patrol, they saw two men placing coal in a cart. It was then 2.30 a.m. They watched the men, and when they saw them going to the village they followed them. Kinnane ran away but was captured by the Constable. The police brought the two men to the barrack, and also the car of coal, which they weighed, and found to be about 9 cwt. In a subsequent search of Moloney's house, they found about half a ton of coal in a bedroom.

The Bench decided to deal summarily with the case.

The defendants then pleaded guilty, and were sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment each.

The action of Sergeant Brady was highly commended.

The Chairman said the police had done a good night's work in bringing the case to justice.

THREATENING LANGUAGE.

Henry Fleming had Robert Gormally, both of the Borheen, up for threatening and abusive language.

Fleming said he was going out with his children on Sunday evening, when Gormally followed, and was "arguing the point" with him. He then threatened him. He also pushed him with his fist.

Asked what was the cause of the trouble, Fleming said he did not know, except that he thought it necessary to bring it to the notice of the Committee of the Volunteers that Gormally had two of their timber rifles, while he was only entitled to one.

Gormally said that Fleming was irritating him, asking him "what did he go to the Committee with the news for?"

Mrs Fleming bore out her husband's statement.

The Chairman said the defendant should find bails, himself in £5, and two sureties of £2 10s each to keep the peace for twelve months, or go to gaol for a month.
