"THE MAGPIE."

In the July issue of The Magpie there are no less than sixteen complete stories of a varied nature, and so one can in his leisure moments take up one or other of them and provide himself with very interesting reading. The opening tale is entitled "The King Resolves," in which E Burney draws a pathetic and up-to-date memoir of the tribulations of an ex-monarch. "The Man Who Cut Himself," written by F J St Aubyn, is a psychological study interspersed with vivid and original incidents. In "Mr Gilray's Holiday Romance" E Carter tells of how his subject went in quest of adventure, and found it, though it turned out not quite what he bargained for. "Mary: a Study in Greys" is by the Hon Albin Brodrick, and there are other stories, each having something distinctive to arrest the attention of the reader, by such eminent writers as Noel Campbell, Edmund Mitchell, W C Flood, Harvey Fisher, A R Stradling, T O'Meara, George Rayne, Violet M Methley, Adam Lilburn, Graec Barrington, Orme Angus, and Alfred Sutton. Attention is directed to The Magpie Literary Competition, conditions of which are given in this number.

FISHING.

A Diagnosis by H. T. Sheringham, with Symptoms by G. E. Studdy. 1/- net.

Waltonians will thoroughly enjoy this excellent and very cleverly written publication, which is published by the Field (Horace Cox), Ltd., Windsor House, Bream's Buildings, London, E.C. Glancing through its 63 pages one will find everything to interest and amuse; indeed humour is a most happy feature of the work, both in the literary contributions, chatty and breezy as the style is, and in the numerous full-page illustrations, which are conceived in lighter vein. The foreword announces that the book deals first with the material things that intimately concern the prosecution of the angler's craft, next he is instructed in what may be called matters of mind and deportment, and later on there is the history of British fresh water fishes, as well as statistical matter, which forms the appendices. The letterpress and general turn-out of the book leave nothing to be desired.

DEATH OF MR HERBERT LLOYD.

The death occurred on June 23rd of Mr Herbert Lloyd, of Plas Cilybebyll, Glamorganshire, at the age of 76. Mr Lloyd, in his early days, lived for some years at Castle Troy, County Limerick, and married, in 1864, Frances Harriette, eldest daughter of the late Simon George Purdon, Esq., of Tinerana, Killaloe, and had he lived until August 18th they would have celebrated their "golden wedding." Mr Lloyd is much regretted by many old friends, by whom he was loved and honoured, and has left behind him the record of an upright, Christian man, always on the side of justice and kindness.

The South of Ireland Cattle Trade Association passed a resolution calling on Mr Runciman to allow the port of Cork to be now opened for the shipment of fat stock for immediate slaughter.
