

off, but that the output of every ounce of ammunition is of the utmost importance, and has a large influence on our operations in the field." Further on he pays a generous tribute to those who were engaged long hours in the shops day and night and who were "doing their duty for King and country in a like manner as those who have joined the Army for service in the field." His lordship concluded that the King has approved wherever service in this great work of organizing the munitions of war has been given faithfully, loyally, and continuously, and the award of a medal will be conferred on the successful termination of the war.

German submarines have recently been busy with their piracy in British waters, and since the tenth instant several have been sunk with some loss of life, this, therefore, eminently satisfactory result this morning that the tide has once again turned, and that the notorious 'U-boat' has at last met her fate, one that has lately overtaken every German man-of-war but two, which has ventured out to sea in the "Dresden," a very fast vessel, was a steamship which escaped from Admiral Jellicoe at the Falkland Islands. Last evening, however, she was caught by the British squadron near Juan Fernandez and sunk after an action lasting five hours, probably a record for a decisive sea battle. There were no British

DEATH OF MRS M. M. WRIGHT.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs Marwick Wright, which took place at her residence, Distillery House, on Saturday evening at the advanced age of ninety-two years. The deceased lady was relict of the late Mr Thomas Wright, manager of the Limerick Distillery, and sister of the late Sir James Marwick, Town Clerk, Glasgow. She was of an amiable and charitable disposition, and her death though in the fulness of years is felt by a number of friends. The funeral, which was largely attended, took place at 10 o'clock this morning for St Mary's Cathedral, the officiating clergy being the Rev R H Semple and the Rev W M McMillen. The staff of the Distillery was present.

Wounded at Neuve C

Amongst the batch of wounded who arrived in London during the week ending the 10th inst. is Lieutenant Robert Gavin, of the Royal Irish Rifles, who is a nephew of Lord Russell. Lieutenant Gavin was a fighting man last week which ended in a British victory resulting in the capture of the village of Neuve Chapelle near La Bassée. Gavin is at present under treatment at the Army Medical School, Netley, and was, says the "Independent," visited by the President of the Department, and so well that the doctors expect to see him able, after his convalescence, to return to the fighting line. Lieutenant Gavin is a young man, and his mother is a sister of Lord Russell. The returned officers speak in high terms of the thorough beating the Germans gave them at Neuve Chapelle.

German Prisoners in

A Parliamentary white paper has been laid on the table tonight giving details of the treatment of German prisoners of war and inter alia the British Islands, as furnished to the House of Commons by Mr Grey to Dr Page, the American representative in London in response to a request from Berlin. Sir Edward, replying on December 10th, says all officers, military and naval, given half-pay of corresponding rank in the British Army. Clothing is their only expense. The British Government can learn from reports that officers in German hands receive the same as corresponding ranks in the German Army. Officers are prepared to do the same here. They will be required to pay for their garrisons. In certain cases officials are interned in camps, living under the same conditions as the soldiers and receive no pay. Soldiers receive no pay, and medical attendants receive pay at English rates when unemployed. At the beginning of December the total cost of the war causes amounted to five.

A Zeppelin was brought down by British and French aviators on the 10th inst. being picked up dead, the crew of 41 being dying later from their injuries.
