IRISH RECRUITING.

Six Battalions Raised.

Lord Lieutenant, as Director-General of Recruiting in Ireland, has sent out another appeal to young men in Ireland, in which he states that the year that has passed has seen Irishmen forsake civil life to take up arms in defence of the lives, livelihood, and those they have left behind. Since his appeal enough men to form six complete battalions have rallied to the support of those who have already joined.

WAR HONOURS.

Distinguished Conduct Medals.

Special supplement to the London Gazette was issued last night announcing the award of the Distinguished Conduct Medal to 99 officers, non-commissioned officers and privates of gallantry and devotion to duty during the Expeditionary Forces in Flanders, the Dardanelles, and East Africa. A corporal in the Territorials, who has won the D.C.M., has been given a distinguished act of conspicuous gallantry. A list of promotions for officers are also announced.

Temporary Honorary Major-General—(Temporary Brigadier-General) G. J. C.B. C.M.G., Army Ordnance Department, Deputy Director of Ordnance Stores.

D.C.M.
 Major R. Connor, 1/2nd North Midland Royal Field Artillery, T.F.
 Corporal J. Farrell, 1st Battalion Royal Fusiliers. For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on the night of 4th October, 1915, at the battle of the Somme.

DEATH OF LORD MASSY.

We deeply regret to announce the death of the Right Hon. Lord Massy, which took place on Sunday afternoon at his residence, Killakee, Rathfarnham, Co. Dublin, in the eightieth year of his age. His lordship had been ill for some months past, and his demise was not unexpected. The sad news has been received with general sorrow at Castleconnell and throughout Limerick and the adjoining counties, where he was so widely known and held in the highest respect by all sections of the community.

John Thomas William Massy, J.P.; D.L., sixth Baron, was born on the 30th of August, 1835, second son of the fourth Baron, and of the daughter of Luke White, of Woodlands, County Dublin. He married in 1863, Lady Lucy Maria Butler, daughter of Somerset-Richard, third Earl of Carrick. Lady Massy died in 1896, leaving one son, the heir to the title, the Hon Hugh Somerset John Massy, and two daughters. The late Lord succeeded to the title on the death of his elder brother Hugh Hammon Ingoldsby, fifth Baron, who died without issue on the 27th February, 1874, and has been a representative Peer for Ireland since 1876. He was not of late years, at all events, a constant attendant in the House of Lords, and seldom intervened in the debates except in matters appertaining to Irish sport in which he took an abiding interest in Parliament and elsewhere. In this connection it is hardly necessary to state that the inland fisheries of Ireland found in him a staunch supporter, and as Chairman for many years of the Salmon and Trout Fisheries Association, he brought his long experience and keen judgment to bear, with great advantage to all concerned in the industry. Similarly, as Chairman of the Irish Game Protection Society, in which he vigorously pressed in the interests of true sport for the strict observance of the Game Laws, his services were of the highest value. In the fisheries of the Shannon he took, naturally, a special interest, and he was one of the oldest members of the Limerick Fishery Board, at whose meetings he was a regular attendant. He was throughout his long life a keen devotee of gun and rod—it is difficult to say in which capacity he most excelled—and for some five months each year he sojourned at his beautiful seat at Hermitage, which he loved so well. Castleconnell owes a great deal to his lordship's interest in piscatorial matters, and it may well be said that he always evinced a warm-hearted concern in the welfare of this deservedly popular fishing centre. Lord Massy was, in short, a true sportsman, whose hospitality was unbounded, and who was never happier than when surrounded by his sporting guests at Hermitage or Killakee. He was an extensive land owner in Ireland, and had seats, in addition to the two mentioned, at Larahoon, Co. Leitrim, and Massy Lodge, Anglesboro', County Limerick. He took a generous and unceasing interest in the welfare of his tenants, who one and all held him in terms of affectionate regard. Lord Massy was a Deputy Lieutenant and Justice of the Peace for the Counties of Limerick and Leitrim, and his fine, commanding presence was a familiar figure on the Castleconnell Bench. He was High Sheriff of the County Leitrim in 1863, and of the County Limerick in 1873. He was an old member of the Killakee Diocesan Synod, one of the Diocesan Trustees, a member of the Diocesan Court, and a Parochial Nominator for Castleconnell. It is not generally known that the late Baron took a deep interest in art, and was himself a talented painter in water colours. Many of his works, chiefly pictures of Norwegian scenery, have been exhibited from time to time in Dublin. He was also fond of portraying the river-scenery in the Shannon, in the vicinity of his beautiful residence there. An interesting fact connected with the history of Lord Massy's family is that the great-grandfather of the first Baron, General Hugh Massy, held a command in the army which was sent from England to subdue the Irish rebellion of 1641. The late Lord was a Unionist in politics, in public and private life Lord Massy was one of the most kindly and unassuming of men, ever easy of access, and courteous to a degree to even the humblest with whom he came in contact. He was a finely preserved man, considering the ripe old age he had attained, and his passing away removes from amongst us a nobleman who will long be remembered with esteem and affection by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

The funeral will take place on Thursday next at 12.45 for Stradbally Church on the arrival of the 9.15 a.m. train from Dublin at Castleconnell Station.

MARRIAGE OF MISS ASQUITH.

Lord Kitchener Present

This afternoon Miss Violet Asquith, Minister's elder daughter, was married in the House of Commons Church, St Martin's, to Mr Maurice Bonham Carter, Secretary to Mr Asquith. It was a quiet affair, and should be as unceremonious as possible, owing to the public position of the bride. The wedding was out of the ordinary, and inside the church was little in the way of decoration. Miss Asquith, accompanied by her mother, motored to the church from Downing Street. The bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth and Miss Kathleen Tennant.

The Archbishop of Canterbury presided, with the assistance of the Bishop of Southwark. The congregation included Mrs. Kitchener, just back from the front; Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, Harcourt, and Lord Sheffield, Bonham Carter, the parents of the bride; Mr Birrell, the American Ambassador; Marquis of Crewe, Lady Randolph Churchill, and Lady Saye and Sele, the Duchess of Devonshire, Lord Chief Justice and Lady Rese, Haldane, Sir Ian Hamilton, Mr. George, Sir Edward and Lady Grey, Balfour, the Italian and French Ambassadors. The church was packed when the bridegroom and his best man, Mr. Carter, of the Grenadier Guards, entered. The bridal procession was forming, and the hymn "O God our Help in Ages Past." There was no reception.

RENT BILL

Scottish Property Protest.

Mr McKinnon Wood, Secretary of the Scottish Property Owners' Association, replying to a deputation to-day, said that the national necessity for limiting coal prices and profit could not imagine that persons who were any more entitled to exemption than other people in war-time. He referred to the fact that the Government did not confiscate anything the owners of property. We are not asking you to give up what you had before the war, added Mr McKinnon Wood, we are only asking you not to increase it "over the pre-war standard." If they were to bear their burden of the war, he said, it would be a heavy one. Mr McKinnon Wood added that the landlord class, as a whole, had suffered off even now than they were a few years ago.
