

the London "Daily Express" says—News has arrived during the first week of April the first two submarines at Kiel, which were of the "U" type, with longer radius and more powerful engines than any previously built. They were ordered for service in the Atlantic.

OF THE REALM ACT CASE.

OF THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE.

I was present at the meeting of the District Council, on Saturday, 8th

A resolution was proposed, condemning the Government for the arrest and punishment of I was not present, for at that time I was away at the County Jail, as a prisoner, inspecting the prisoners there. The resolution was brought on before the Council was completed I cannot say it was most unusual and unbusiness-like. I would have pointed out to the Council the resolution that the Government had passed this arrest is not the Government's business. It is the Government's duty to lead the North to arm, drill, and condition Government stiffened and by the mingling of Conservative and Liberal stiffened enough by tenfold.

It does not deserve the name of a Government that does not protect its citizens, either North or South, from the purpose of slaying each other.

Whether Mr Brennan made use of such language attributed to him, but whether he deserves, for the good and peace of the country, the severest punishment.

Who wants to fight, have now the opportunity. Let North and South give up their quarrel and squandering about our country and try to slay each other, let them do it instead. Let them join their ranks at the Front, to avenge the atrocities committed by their Clergy, Nuns, Churches, and children.

Let it go down in this war, it will be a day of "God Save Ireland," and not the contrary.

Irish history could tell you that we have been beaten from without, faction has ruined it. Will faction ruin it now?

Yours faithfully,
J. O'G. DELMEGE (Captain).

DEATH OF MRS O'GBADY.

We regret to record the death of Mrs Thomas O'Grady, Blackwater, which took place on the 11th inst, to the deep regret of a wide circle of friends, who sincerely sympathise with her bereaved husband and relatives. The remains were conveyed to the Parish Church, where on Thursday solemn High Mass was celebrated—Rev Fr G Russell, P.P., celebrant; Rev F Hartigan, deacon; Rev J Moloney, sub-deacon; Rev M A O'Donoghue, Rev J Madden, and Rev M Murphy forming the choir. After the service the funeral left for the family burial place at Kilmurry.

The following were the chief mourners—Thos O'Grady (husband), Ml O'Grady (son), Thomas O'Grady (grandson), Wm McNamara (brother), T McNamara (nephew), Wm O'Grady, Martin O'Grady, Ml Laffan, and John Moloney (brothers-in-law), Wm O'Grady, Ballyglass; John O'Grady, Thomas O'Grady, Edmond O'Grady, Ballybricken; Patk O'Grady, W Fogarty, John Laffan, Richard Laffan, Edmond Laffan, John Lane, James Lane, Frank Lane (nephews), John O'Donoghue, S Reardon, Edmond Ryan, D Quinlan, Ml Lane, and P Stephens.

The funeral was the largest that passed through the city for a long time, and it would be impossible to give anything like a complete list of the general public present.

was in the hope of getting any benefit to be found to create confusion in their own ulterior views. He surprised it Dublin Castle and Sir were behind these matters. He rank and file of the new movement he blamed their leaders for their ruination. (Hear, hear). Any change in the country would be required only be derivable from the consumption of beer, and porter.

As an amendment, Mr Mackey moved the Dublin Corporation and Irish Financial Relations Committee resolutions be discussed.

Mr Bourke seconded the amendment. The Chairman—I will take a part in the discussion.

Mr Mackey protested without success, in the absence of a chance of explaining.

The Chairman—There is no need to see what way the Council vote.

Mr Mackey—You will not hear me. The Chairman—Not for the present. I will hear you all day.

Mr Mackey—I consider your exercise of your powers as Chairman to be a disgrace.

The Chairman—I am delighted with the character of me.

Mr Mackey—I did not expect that.

The Chairman—I will take a division.

Mr Mackey—You will hear me.

Mr Quinlan—Chair, chair.

Mr Hogan said he was in favour of the man's resolution of confidence in the Government, but he thought Mr Mackey should express his views as well as Mr O'Grady.

The Chairman—If the Council decide to discuss the amendment, after further discussion, the Court will hear Mr Mackey's reasons for the amendment.

Mr Mackey proceeded to say that the resolutions made no reference to the Irish Party, and if they were in any way contrary to the party he would not support them. It was well known that Ireland was more than her full share of revenue as an instance the findings of the Irish Financial Relations Commission. In 1819 the revenue raised in Ireland was £5,000,000; in 1870 it reached £18,000,000; and for 1900 it was estimated at £26,000,000. Having regard to these figures, he did not see how any man could justify the over-taxation of this country.

Lord Emily said he should vote for the resolution as he did not believe the amendment forwarded by the Dublin Corporation and the Financial Relations Committee was justified. (Hear, hear).
