He was looking for work, and at Kilfinane he met some men who were Volunteers, and they took him to a house and gave him tea. He was told to be at a place at the foot of the hill at 1 o'clock. A man gave him a revolver, rifle, and ammunition. He did not want to go, but the man said that he should go. They went along, and when he saw the lorries coming he ran through a yard and up a hill. SHANNON SALMON FISHERIES.

A lull has come with regard to the Shannon salmon fisheries, and the takes for some time past have not been as large as they were since the opening of the season. The fishing up to the slack gave a fairly good season, more than the average one. No great takes are now anticipated until the peak begin to run, some two or three weeks hence.
