Plea of InsanityIn Charges Against Limerick Prisoner

A plea of insanity was made in the charges heard at military court in Cork against Thos. Leahy, Tournafalla, Co. Limerick, of (1) having an automatic pistol; (2) 69 rounds ammunition; (3) attempting to shoot with intent to murder at Castleliland.

A specialist in mental diseases, examined by Mr. Joseph McCarthy, said accused was mentally deficient; he imagined that he heard voices saying they would do away with him; he thought he saw visions of certain persons watching him; he also imagined he used to hear police lorries coming into the yard of the house where he was staying.

To the Court—The bringing up of the accused on the capital charge would have made his condition worse, but independent of that he was quite insane.

A military doctor swore he was mentally deficient.

To the Court—It was reported to witness that the accused had attempted to hang himself by a handkerchief around his neck; he is still of opinion that the accused was unfit to be tried.

The decision was not announced.

ARREST OF MAYOR OF LIMERICKEast Limerick Conflict*FIGHT LASTING FIVE HOURS*SIX REPUBLICANS REPORTED KILLED*And Fourteen Wounded*Sharp Encounter Near Knocklong

News reached Limerick yesterday that a sharp encounter between Crown forces and members of the I.R.A. took place on Monday afternoon at Lackally, between Emly and Knocklong. The fight, it is said, lasted five hours, and the official version is that five civilians were killed and fourteen wounded, and that the military casualties were only two soldiers wounded.

A report from Tipperary gives the following version of what occurred:

A four hours battle took place on Monday afternoon between a party of the Yorkshire Regiment and Republican Volunteers, at Lackally and Garryspillane, between Galbally, Emly and Knocklong. The military version of the affair is that they were attacked by the Republicans at Lackally, where two of the Yorks were wounded. The military, returning the fire, claim to have killed five Republicans and wounded about a dozen others. The military placed the five dead bodies on a cart, and the two wounded soldiers on another, and were removing them when, near Garryspillane, some distance farther on, they were attacked by a fresh column of Republicans, who captured the cart with their five dead comrades. The military also left behind the cart on which the two wounded Yorks were, but succeeded in bringing away the men themselves. The military were compelled to fight a rearguard action on the way back to Galbally. The sound of the firing was heard many miles around. The wounded soldiers were brought to Tipperary Military hospital, where they are progressing favourably. At two o'clock yesterday morning large bodies of Crown forces proceeded from Tipperary to the scene of the fight, and recovered the missing caps of the wounded soldiers. They found a Winchester repeating rifle and some ammunition left behind by the Volunteers. An exhaustive search was made of the countryside.

The Official Report

Military Headquarters, Dublin, issued the following report last night: A cycling patrol consisting of an officer and ten other ranks of the "Green Howards," and one sergeant and two constables of the Royal Irish Constabulary were ambushed about three o'clock yesterday at Lackally, near Emly, by a large body of rebels. The Crown forces returned the fire of the rebels, and a prolonged engagement ensued, during which about 15 of the ambushed were seen to fall. The rebels then dispersed, leaving five of their dead on the ground. The Crown forces had only one soldier slightly wounded. During the action the Crown forces commandeered a farm cart, on which they placed the dead bodies and started to proceed to their destination. As they were leaving heavy fire was opened on them from the north and west, forcing them to abandon the cart and withdraw in a southerly direction. This small party of soldiers and police then discovered another body of about 50 rebels advancing on them. They were led by their officer, and charged the party which was attacking them from the west and scattered them. During the part of the action one soldier was seriously wounded, while four rebels were seen to fall. The military and police were then

SINGLAND TRAGEDYMilitary Inquiry Held*How Henry Clancy Met Death

At the New Barracks, Limerick, yesterday a military inquiry was held into the circumstances of the death of Henry Clancy, a labourer, who was killed on Sunday afternoon near Singland bridge.

A civilian witness was the first examined and said he knew the deceased, who resided in Limerick; he was a labourer on the parish staff of the G.S.C.W.R.; witness left him alive on Sunday at 3 p.m.; he was 21 years of age and unmarried; he next saw him in the morgue in the military hospital, New Barracks, that morning and identified his dead body. He was an ex-service man who had fought in France in the Royal Warwickshire Regiment during the war; witness did not know if he had any connection with the I.R.A.; he left home every Monday morning to return on different days from his work—on week-ends.

A police witness stated that he was a member of a party of police who left William street Barracks at 3.15 p.m. on Sunday last in Orosley tenders and accompanied an armoured car; when approaching Singland railway bridge, on the main road from Limerick to Tipperary, and about a mile from Limerick he observed a number of men running across the bridge on the railway, and from the road under the bridge, on the left-hand side to where men ran, there are a number of cottages. On the south side of the road and the right side of the bridge, some of the men between the cottages and the railway bridge good many people, including women and children, were about; witness had the car surrounded and fire was opened on the bridge and the police returned the fire—the fire opened by the parties retreating; he saw a man definitely fire—and fire came from the cottages; as the police were overtaken by two of the fugitives the police were on and the police fired in return; men surrendered, but before doing so he saw each of them throw a revolver a bush; these were afterwards produced by witness as he was going up to the prison. There was a service Webley Mark VI and Coit; both were service revolvers; one fully loaded and the other had five live cartridges and one empty case; witness took prisoners to a tender on the road and handed them over to another police officer, and proceeded to search the houses and the vicinity; there were then a number of people on the road returning to the city; these included women and children, and there were passengers; he saw the deceased running among the people, and this would be within a couple of minutes after he had been put in the tender; he was run in the direction of the bridge; he was open to half and did not do so; the police opened fire; witness saw him fall, and he reached him and found that he was in a condition; he lived only a few minutes and conveyed the body to the barracks.

To the Court—These incidents occurred about 3.20 p.m.

Another police witness, who was one of the party, stated a number of civilians ran as the police approached; witness went with others to look after the transport rest of the party pursuing the civilians; minutes after the pursuit began he heard from the direction of the railway; when fire died down 3 civilians were brought to transport; the civilians were placed in a body of a Cromwell tender with two policemen charge of them; many people, including women and children, were at this time towards the city, and the deceased, who was about two miles from the car, was

ARREST OF MAYOR OF LIMERICK

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LIMERICK LEADER.
SIR—On behalf of the citizens of Limerick I must protest against the treatment of our Mayor, Ald B M O'Mara.

On Monday, 25th ult, he received an invitation from the Crown forces to attend at the barracks. This he courteously replied to, pointing out that his time was limited and valuable, and asking for some explanation of the invitation. The reply to this was a command to appear before the competent military authority, again giving no indication of any charge or any apparent reason for the summons. About an hour afterwards Crown forces went into his private office at the City Hall and brought him before the military authorities, where he was accused of contempt of Court without being informed of why he was summoned to attend the Court. A R. Officer of course refused to speak, and a fine of £10 was then imposed, with an alternative of seven days in gaol.

On Thursday morning, two days after above proceedings, he was arrested at his private residence and imprisoned.

We have abundant experience in Ireland of arrests and imprisonments, but the above treatment of the Chief Magistrate of a great city is surely almost unique.

I deem it a civic duty to make this formal protest, but need not say that our Mayor and the citizens of Limerick will pursue their chosen path unperurbed by this latest display.

JAMES CLEARY, Ald (Deputy Mayor).

Limerick, 29th April, 1921.

The military, returning the fire, claim to have killed five Republicans and wounded about a dozen others. The military placed the five dead bodies on a cart, and the two wounded soldiers on another, and were removing them when, near Garryville, some distance further on, they were attacked by a fresh column of Republicans, who captured the cart with their five dead comrades. The military also left behind the cart on which the two wounded Yorks were, but succeeded in bringing away the men themselves. The military were compelled to fight a rearguard action on the way back to Galbally. The sound of the firing was heard many miles around. The Official Report

Military Headquarters, Dublin, issued the following report last night: A cycling patrol consisting of an officer and ten other ranks of the "Green Howards," and one sergeant and two constables of the Royal Irish Constabulary were ambushed about three o'clock yesterday at Lackally, near Ennis, by a large body of rebels. The Crown forces returned the fire of the rebels, and a prolonged engagement ensued, during which about 15 of the ambushers were seen to fall. The rebels then dispersed, leaving five of their dead on the ground. The Crown forces had only one soldier slightly wounded. During the action the Crown forces commanded a farm cart, on which they placed the dead bodies and started to proceed to their destination. As they were leaving heavy fire was opened on them from the north and west, forcing them to abandon the cart and withdraw in a southerly direction. This small party of soldiers and police then discovered another body of about 50 rebels advancing on them. They were led by their officer, and charged the party which was attacking them from the west and scattered them. During this part of the action one soldier was seriously wounded, while four rebels were seen to fall. The military and police were then again attacked by another party of rebels, estimated to be about forty strong, but effectively was the fire returned that several rebels were seen to fall, and they did not further interfere with the withdrawal of the Crown forces, who reached their destination without being further molested, with two wounded soldiers, who succeeded in keeping with them all the time. The Crown forces were forced to abandon six of their bicycles, but they captured two rifles, one carbine, a quantity of small arms and ammunition, revolver ammunition, some of which were "dum-dum," two grenades, several hand-grenades, a quantity of service kits, and odd items of military equipment. The action occupied about a period of five and a half hours.

CASTLECONNELL TRAGEDY

FURTHER REFERENCES IN HOUSE OF LORDS

In the House of Lords yesterday,

Lord Parrot asked whether any steps had been taken to ensure an impartial inquiry into the circumstances which led to the death of Mr Q Donovan, of the Shannon Hotel, Castleconnell, on April 17, and into the allegations made as to the conduct of the Auxiliaries on that occasion. He said he had received a telegram from Mr Moran, solicitor, of Limerick, saying—"Dear Lord Crawford I am greatly informed regarding facts of inquiry. Court empty except for Press and relatives, every question to witness put through President, all words impartially no answers. No (Lord Parrot,) understood the Press reports were censored, and therefore to Tipperary, and about a mile from Limerick, he observed a number of men running from the bridge on the railway and from the road under the bridge; on the left-hand side to which the men ran, there are a number of cottages; this is on the north side of the road and the Limerick side of the bridge; some of the men went between the cottages and the railway line; a good many people, including women and children, were about; witness had the cottages surrounded and fire was opened on the police and the police returned the fire—the fire was opened by the parties retreating; he saw one man definitely fire—and fire came from behind the cottages, as the police were overtaking two of the fugitives the police were fired on and the police fired in return; two men surrendered, but before doing so he saw each of them throw a revolver into a bush; these were afterwards produced to witness as he was going up to the prisoners; one was a service Webley Mark VI and one a Colt; both were service revolvers; one was fully loaded and the other had five live cartridges and one empty case; witness took both prisoners to a tender on the road and handed them over to another police official, and then proceeded to search the houses and the vicinity; there were then a number of people on the road returning to the city; these included women and children, and there were paramilitaries; he saw the deceased running among the people, and this would be within a couple of minutes after he had been put in the tender; he was running in the direction of the bridge; he was called upon to halt and did not do so; the police opened fire; witness saw him fall, and when he reached him found that he was in a dying condition; he lived only a few minutes; they conveyed the body to the barracks.

To the Court—These incidents occurred at about 3.30 p.m.

Another police witness, who was one of the party, stated a number of civilians ran away as the police approached; witness was left with others to look after the transport, the rest of the party pursuing the civilians; a few minutes after the pursuit began he heard firing from the direction of the railway; when the firing died down 2 civilians were brought to the transport; the civilians were placed in the body of a Orossey tender with two police in charge of them; many people, including women and children, were at this time going towards the city, and the deceased, who had been about two minutes in the car, vaulted out of it on the right-hand side; he started running in a zig-zag fashion through the people trying to mingle with them towards the bridge; police pursued him for about 50 yards; he was called on to halt many times, but took no notice, and was getting away when the order to fire was given; he was retreating the police when witness gave the order to fire; two rounds of rifle shot were fired and one from a Winchester shotgun; deceased fell and succumbed in a few minutes, and was conveyed to the morgue in the New Barracks.

Medical evidence was given to the effect that the following wounds were found—On the posterior aspect of the left shoulder there were multiple small wounds, apparently superficial; on the right side, below the costal margin, a gunshot bullet wound and apparently the entrance wound, about two inches to the left of the mid-line at the back; a bullet wound on a level with the lower border of the scapular, apparently the exit wound; on the posterior aspect of the scapular, slightly to the left of the mid-line, a bullet wound entrance, and an exit wound found; the cause of death was due to shock and hemorrhage as a result of the wounds.

To the Court—The wounds in the shoulder would not be sufficient apparently to cause death—would not be the immediate cause of death; the shoulder wounds were consistent with the fire from a shotgun; there were scratches on the face which might be caused by falling; there were several superficial abrasions that were not inconsistent with falling.

In reply to cross examination, the first police witness said the man was shot on the road and not in a field.
