

Four People Killed.

The Press Association says:—A shocking motor car disaster occurred at Stokesay River bridge, Craven Arms, Shropshire, on Sunday, when four people—two men, a woman, and a boy—were killed.

The car, which was driven by a man, was proceeding across the bridge when it skidded and fell thirty feet into the river below. There were six people in the car, and the other two were rescued by a Wolverhampton doctor.

It is believed that the party were from Cardiff, and were proceeding to Church Stretton. One of those drowned was a blind man.

The accident occurred about three o'clock in the afternoon. When the car was pulled out of the river three of the occupants were found pinned beneath it. The fourth victim died shortly after being resuscitated. The party consisted of a grandfather (who was blind), mother and son, and another person. The mother of the boy and the driver were saved by the doctor, who plunged into the river and rescued them. The bodies were removed to a school near by.

PRISON DEATH OF INNOCENT MAN.

Confession of the Real Robb Too Late.

Thirteen years after being sentenced to two years' penal servitude, the innocence of a named Charles Guett had been established in Toulon court.

In 1911 a robbery by armed men took place Toulon (says the "London Evening News") and three men were arrested, Guett being one of them.

He protested his innocence, but the victims the robbery identified him as one of the robbers and he was sentenced to twenty years' penal servitude at Guiana Convict Settlement. Guett made several attempts to establish his innocence but without success.

Recently a dying man, named Ambrosio, confessed that he was the third man in the robbery. The news was telegraphed to the settlement Guiana, but Guett had died a few days before.

A comparison of the photographs of Guett and Ambrosio shows an extraordinary likeness between the men, and this explains the tragic error.
