

canonries in St. Mary's Cathedral, which is now the Cathedral of the whole united diocese, were assigned to Ardferb and Aghadoe. Two of these have recently become vacant—Kilpeacon by the death of Canon Dickson, and Ballycahane by the retirement of Canon McClean. The former was filled by the promotion of Canon Adderly, of Listowel, who was previously holder of the stall of Croagh, now abolished; and the latter is to be filled by the Rev. Thomas Clarke, Rector of Tralee. Canon Clarke is well known in Limerick diocese, in which he served with distinction for fifteen years before his removal to the Parish of Tralee, the chief parish in Kerry. He has thrown himself with great enthusiasm into his work in that important centre, and his clerical brethren have shown their appreciation of his services by making him one of their representatives in the Diocesan Council and General Synod. He will be a valuable addition to the preaching staff of St. Mary's.
