very strongly to the audience, although the Society's main business was to preserve family life, and to make the home the place where the child should live a happy enduring life. Yet there were many cases in which there was no possibility of family life, and in these special cases the Society undertook the committal of the children to schools and institutions where they would be fed, clothed, educated, and fitted for their future careers.

For the past number of years grants had to be made by the Central Fund to meet the Branch expenditure, and it was his earnest desire that the Branch should not only be self-supporting, but that it should be in a position to help the weak Branches in less densely populated districts in the West of Ireland.

On the initiative of the Misses D & J Goodbody, a collection was made at the conclusion of the meeting, and amounted to £3 3s 4d.
