EFFECTS OF ELECTRICIFICATION Scheme.

At a large and representative meeting of the Clare fishermen held at the Temperance Hall, Kilrush, on Saturday evening Mr Wm Counihan, Querrin House, presided. Representatives were present from Kilkee, Labasheeda, Carrigaholt, Doonbeg, Kilrush, etc.

A strong resolution was proposed protesting against the Shannon electric lighting scheme on the grounds that it would destroy the salmon fishing industry of the Shannon inasmuch as the water would get contaminated and the fry of the salmon would be killed.

The Chairman said according to a recent meeting held at Limerick, the Government would not give the fishermen compensation for twelve years.

Mr Keane—What they really mean is that you would have shown that your livelihood was gone through no fault of your own. One or two bad years you would have fishing would not do.

Mr Anderson—If they put new hatcheries in Clonderlaw Bay I think it would meet the matter.

Chairman—If the fry have not pure water to mature it is good-bye to your salmon fishing.

Mr Anderson—This will affect the upper part of the Shannon the worst, and it is there all the hatcheries are. This scheme is now going on and all the Shannon will be poisoned as a result.

Chairman—And one of the few industries now left to us.

The resolution was unanimously passed, as was one calling on the Government to take some action to safeguard the fisherman's interests and to at least provide new hatcheries in the lower part of the Shannon.

COUNTY LIMERICK MOTOR ACCIDENT

Labourer Killed

He fell across the mudguard and was carried some fifty yards when the motor pulled up.

McCarthy was then found unconscious with both legs badly injured. He was attended by Dr Moran, Tipperary, and conveyed in an ambulance to Tipperary hospital where died on Saturday.

The car was driven by Lily Byrne, Turson House, Cahir, who was accompanied by her father and mother.

At the inquest a verdict of accidental death was recorded.

THE CASE OF MAJOR SHEPPARD.

Mr Rawlinson, K.C., M.P., has presented his report in connection with the case of Major Sheppard. It is a serious indictment of police methods, and likely to cause as much stir as did the famous Cass case many years ago, which was the political undoing of the then Home Secretary, Mr Henry Matthews. The inquiry has revealed that Major Sheppard is not the only victim who has been seized and denied the right of bail, and it is clear that special steps must be taken to establish that the rights of the public outweigh the convenience of the police. What happened at Vine street, however, is not common practice. Vine street has always had a notorious reputation for high-handed action, and always has been the object of public suspicion.

Bank in Main-street, Abbeyreale, which is almost completed and will be formally opened business in a week or two, is certainly one of the finest provincial buildings of its kind in the south. Nothing has been spared to make it standard model for urban banking business. The former building, which had been completely demolished to make room for the present edifice was purchased for £3,500. The new premises will cost about £10,000.

A number of reinforcements despatched to undertake the operation totals 60,000 men.

63-STOURED BUILDING.

For nearly two decades the Woolworth building which is 792 feet high, with 55 storeys, dominated Lower Manhattan unchallenged, plans are now being prepared for the erection of a 63-storey building in the rapidly expanding business centre which surrounds the Grand Central Station in Forty-second street.

It is estimated that the projected structure would cost over 15,000,000 dollars (£3,000,000). It would have a 19-storey tower surmounting the main structure on a series of steps as dictated by the Zoning laws. The names of the promoters are not yet announced.
