Journey to Adare.

The "Sonia," with the remains of the late Earl of Dunraven, K.P., P.C., on board, reached Foynes yesterday evening at halfpast three from Southampton waters. She was flying her white ensign at half-mast was nying her white ensign at half-mast and presented a perfect tableau as she steamed up the roadstead to the harbour. Her graceful outlines cut out clearly in the golden sunlight of a typical June evening, with the atmosphere genial and warm, and the varies of the Sunanon to saling gents, on the shingled 'beach. The "Sonia" should have reached her destination at daybreak, but encountering a thick for after clearing the coast of Control of the coast of the coast of Control of the coast of the coa

The remained of the voyage was accomplished without further incident, and as the craft drew into the pice at Fuynes the crew stood silently on the foredeck, while the people that congregated on the wharf uncovered, and observed a reverent demeanour. The coffin which was of polished cak, was then taken ashore and placed in the water heave for ad- on ashore and placed in the motor hearse for the journey to Adare, which was reached at half-past four. On the casquet was laid the craft's ensign, and a wreath of bay and if leaves from his daughter, Lady Ardee. Passing through Foynes and Askeaton the houses were closed, and approaching Adare the remains were met by a large number of the people of the locality, who were evidently touched at the last sad home-coming. Every house in the picturesque village was closed as the bier travelled down, while the bells of the Protestant and Catholic churches tolled their mournful dirge. It was a melancholy occasion, and manifestations of sorrow and regret were general en every side. Adare had seen festive occasions and social events promoted by the late Peer, but last evening the inhabitants had to mourn the loss of a generous bene-factor and kind-hearted and lovable patron; a nobleman who filled a conspicuous place in the life of his country, and who loved the ancestral home and its warm-hearted the ancestral home and its warm-hearted people. Arriving at the Manor, the coffin was deposited in the small drawing-room, which was during the evening visited by the residents, who came to offer their last tribute of respect and esteem.

in the Protestant church, the Rev. Canon Orpen, Rector, paid a graceful tribute to the late Earl of Dunraven. He said he was a great and ardent lover of his country, a generous subscriber to the Church, and a regular attendant at divine worship. His lordship was the oldest parishioner in Adare, and they would all miss him very much. He was a broad-minded man, kindly in his judgments of those who differed from him politically; and on behalf of the con-him politically: and on behalf of the congregation and himself he desired to ofter deep sympathy with Lady Ardee and family.

In the Catholic Church, at the first Mass on Sunday morning, the Very Rev. Canon Griffin, P.P., paid a touching tribute to the late Lord Dunraven. He referred to his lordship's love for Adare and its people, and said his loss would be deeply felt in the locality, particularly in Adare, where he took a great interest in the Catholic church. At the second Mass, Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick, C.C., also alluded to the dead Earl as a benefactor, and his loss to the people of Adare. Adare.

Preaching at the morning service in ister Adare Methodist church, the Rev. R. H. Ludlow voiced his deep regret and that of the congregation at the death of the Earl of Dunraven, who, he said, had laid the foundation-stone of their church and had been a benefactor to it and to the manse on many occasions.

Many occasions.

At a special meeting of the members of the Adare Village Hall, erected by the late Earl of Dunraven, the following was passed in silence:—"We beg to tender to the Lady Ardee and other members of the family our sincere and heartfelt sympathy on the death of our worthy patron, the Earl of Dunraven. It is to him we over constructed for health. It is to him we owe our gratitude for building and giving to us this beautiful Hall, and which goes to show how deeply interested his lordship was in the welfare of his employes and the inhabitants of Adare in general. Words fail to express how deeply we mourn his loss, as his kindness and generality to us our payer he forgotten." ossal generosity to us can never be forgotten. The Committee of the Limerick Carnegie

Free Library and Museum has passed the following:—"That we desire to place on record our deepest regret at the death of the record our deepest regret at the death of the Earl of Dunraven, K.P., who was a generous benefactor to this institution, and that we tender our heartfelt sympathy to Lady Ardee and the other relatives of the deceased Jutch nobleman. pears f the

The President addressed the meeting as

Limerick Synod-

Since we met here a year ago there have been few changes in our body. The Rev. W. H. Dobbin left us to take charge of a parish in the diocese of Cashel and Emly and his place has been filled by the appoint ment of the Rev. C. D. Clark, who has had the advantage of experience both in Ireland and England; and the Rev. J. R. Campion, after holding the curacy of Rathkeale and Nantenan for about a year, was promoted to an important cure in Ardfert. He has left, vacant a post which could be filled by a man not able for very hard, work, who would have the use of a suitable house and would have the use of a suitable house and.

The late Earl of Dunraven was not a member of this Synod; but in many ways, and as his Majesty's Lieutenant of the county, was a foremost man amongst us. Like his predecessors in title he was a liberal supporter of his parish; and, like them, was careful of the fine old church, restored through the generosity of his family, and or the village which was rebuilt years ago in such a seemly fashibn that we look on it as a place of which Limerick may be proud.

When, this afternoon, we lay Lord Dunraven's body in the beautiful cloisters adjoining the church, we shall feel that we are bidding forward to an able many-sided. are bidding farewell to an able, many-sided and patriotic Irishman.

As I think of that peaceful, well-kept, resting place, I ask why is a well-ordered graveyard so rate not only in Limerick but in wide districts of Ireland? It is a grief to me to find so much neglect in many of the places where we lay the bodies of those whom we love. It is needless to describe the squalor with which you are familiar, and which you deplore. Neglect in this matter is a disgrace to our civilisation. The gravewhich you depicte. Neglect in this matter is a disgrace to our civilisation. The grave-yard is God's Acre, as the Church is His House. Reverence for His Holy Name should inspire to vigorous action all who are responsible for the up-keep of places dedicated not only to His service, but to the menory of His sons and daughters called to their rest.

The Report of the Diocesan Council deals chiefly with our financial position; and with it are bound up reports of the Boards chosen by the Synod to consider the claims of our Temperance, Education, and Missionary organisations. All these reports are rightly considered as calling for your attention

Our financial position is sound—that is we pay our way, and no stipend has been cut down by failure on the part of the diocese to meet its engagements. So far so good. But the questions arise—What about the future: and, still more important, what about the sources of our revenue. The discussion of the first of the two questions I leave to others. The second calls for some words of friendly warning fron your Bishop.

The Church of God is not, primarily, a receive a maintenance which is not nig-gardle. But it would in many ways be an receive a maintenance which is not nig-gardly. But it would in many ways be an-ill day for this, or any diocese, if the free will offering of living Churchmen were not needed for carrying on the work of our living Lord. And if in any parish there is living Lord. And if in any parish there is no real sacrifice required for strictly local purposes, then, surely, the people should be reminded of the many calls that come to them from other parts of Church or discesse, or the mission field. Our diminishing con-tributions to assessments and to many charities are not, one fears, wholly due to a reduction in our population. More than that I need not—less it would not be honest of me—to say on a subject closely connected with our spiritual life.

I have spoken of the need of taking seriously the duty of helping with our money all kinds of Christian objects, according ing to our means. There are other ways in which men have opportunities of serving their Church—opportunities which numbers of our lay people willingly embrace—not less in Limerick than elsewhere. I mean, for instance membership of Vestries and Councils: of Synods, Diocesan and General whose importance in the life of the Church we all recognise. It, is clear that busy men are ready to sacrifice time to attend these gatherings, where we not only get threegh business, but have the pleasure of coming into personal stouch with friends and neighbours. From the time of disestablish-ment the Church of Ireland has successfully taught its members that a healthy religious life cannot be maintained without so-operation between the clergy and lairy, who meet on equal terms in our ecclesiastical assemblies.

With regard to lay attendance at the chief of these, the meetings of the General Synod, there seem to be difficulties in soveral dioceses, including our own. We for example, have on paper a first rate list of members, but unfortunately many of shem find it impossible to attend the annual sessions. It is always difficult, and somesessions. It is always difficult, and seeme-times impossible, for mene to break into their ordinary routine, and spend two or three days in Dublin. And it might be said that dioceses like ours, and Toam, and Killaloe, cannot fairly demand from busy-men this sacrifice of time and money. On the other hand, if we fail to secure local representatives who can discharge their duty, and if we do not wish to shot med in or near Dublin to represent us. 17 will not be possible to defend, or maintain, the present arrangement by which we are given a number of representatives out of all proportion to our Church population. This is a matter for our laymen to consider and talk over and I content myself with dis-charging myduty in pointing out how westand. You will, I hope, read the reports presented to you dealing with the three departments of Church, work to which I have allowed. Those dealing with temperance and colo speak for themselver.

You will note that the latter is honger than usual, and deals with questions deeply affecting our Church and country. The Board was invited by the Minister of Education to give advice about the drawing up of a new programme for National Schools and it has put on record its answer to that courteous invitation.

This Board of ours is doing work, the success of which is vital to our existence as a Church in this diocese, and I carnestly ask the co-operation of the whole Symod in maintaining and extending its operations.

We have a page of valuable statistics given to us as the Report of the Beard of Missions. Let me supplement it by calling your attention to the urgency of the "World Call to the Church, issued by the Church of England Assembly, in four really wonderful volumes. These books, putting before us the splendid openings for the Church of us the splendid openings for the Church of Christ in all parts of the world, and reminding us of the growth of that Church, and of the able and dedevoted men and women who have done and are doing our work for us in the mission field, can be bought for a few shillings, and will, I hope, be on sale in our city.
