

Body of Skeleton

Found On Mungret Island

The body of a man, which had apparently been for over twelve months in the river, was found in a small island in the Shannon off Mungret on Sunday. The head had entirely disappeared, and only the skeleton form of the trunk remained, boots being attached to the feet. The Gardai are seeking information as to the identity.

An inquest was held by Coroner Clery and a verdict of "found drowned—unknown," returned.

The remains were interred in Mungret graveyard.
