

Death of an Old Parnellite

Late Mr M O'Donnell

The demise of Michael O'Donnell, Oldtown, Hospital, severs another chain in the fast dwindling of the old supporters of Parnell. He stood with the late John Dillon in the Mitchelstown Square shooting and was the first to come to the assistance of the dying victims of the land war. He somehow believed in supporting the Treaty, believing its policy the best for Ireland. The obsequies were followed by a large host, three miles long.
