If they did not organise themselves they would be out of the way. More progressive business was to develop industry to organise an exchange with the other nations of the world. They had a great many friends and if they organised they would be ready to join hands at the moment everything and sells goes through was one of the principal things to prevent. They wanted to get the gland as much as they could not want their imports going through England, to be various chippings and processes. It was now the country turned west, and in the manufactures of the (Applause). The speaker said he would like to see the country's basic structure. He was not going to say that England was their enemy, it was possible to create a market, where goods that could be sold to England, could be sold to the world with a profit. The speaker went on to state that he had been in consultation with the officials, and propositions that would help the trade and at the same time the market would be overcome. Brazil scrub cattle, and were the best of the Argentine for the market. They were naturally to have their cattle as much as they could with the Argentine. The market worked as contemplated in that Brazil would be a thoroughbred bulls in Ireland while other light tweed called drill, from Brazil, could be exported. In return the Free State market from Brazil coffee and the present was costing the enormous amount through in-

LIMERICK MAN'S DEATH IN GALWAY.

We regret to announce the death, which occurred yesterday at his residence, William street, Galway, of Mr Samuel E. O'Reilly, manager and secretary of the "Connacht Tribune." The sad news has come as a great shock to his numerous friends in Limerick, of which he was a native, being a member of a well-known and respected family. He started his career in the clerical department of the "Limerick Chronicle," and after some years here left in 1913 to take up the position of junior accountant on the "Tribune." His abilities, courtesy, and zeal marked him out for speedy advancement, until finally, some years ago, he became manager and secretary of the concern. A man of lovable personality, kindly, courteous, and generous, he was extremely popular in the "Cite of the Tribes" and the surrounding districts, and his premature demise at the age of about 40 years is deeply mourned by his colleagues in the "Tribune" office and the public generally. We tender sincere sympathy to his widow and daughter, and also to his relatives in Limerick. The funeral is to take place to-morrow (Sunday) at Forthill, Galway.
