Death of Mrs Wilkinson

Old Limerick folk will generously afford sympathy with Mr James Wilkinson on the death of his wife, which took place at her residence, Knais Road, City, after a short illness of a fortnight. She was sister of Very Rev Dean Swain, and last year celebrated the golden jubilee of her marriage. She belonged to a well known city family, as was also her husband, who was one of the small group of Protestants in Limerick who joined the Home Rule movement in the days of Parnell, and when it required patriotic courage to advocate its principles. She was a cultured musician and often in her day figured at local charity concerts, being possessed of a charming vocal personality.
