DEATH OF REV. WILLIAM CORRIGAN.

The Methodist Church in Ireland has suffered the loss of one of its best known ministers by the death, after a brief illness, of the Rev. William Corrigan. He was born at Churchill, Enniskillen, on 16th March, 1863, and on the completion of his education entered upon a commercial career. He was accepted as a candidate for the ministry in 1888, and was appointed to Arklow. Subsequent rural appointments were Charlemont, Maryborough, and Skibbereen; but in 1895 he was called to be minister of the Ballymacarrett congregation in Belfast, and thereafter his ministry was exercised in important city circuits, Duncarn Gardens and Knock, in Belfast; Blackhall Place and Rathmines in Dublin, and Cork and Limerick all claiming him. As a preacher, pastor, and administrator he had qualities of mind and heart that endeared him to those to whom he ministered, and enabled him to inaugurate many schemes for the benefit of Irish Methodism. After forty-two years of faithful service he reretired from the active work of the ministry in 1930; and attached himself to the Knock congregation, Belfast. He, however, continued to serve the Church with undiminished zeal. At the Conference held in Belfast last month he delivered an impassioned address to an audience of two thousand people on the claims of home mission work. He is survived by his wife and one daughter.
