CISTERCIAN'S DEATH AT ROSCREA.

Native of Co. Limerick.

A great gloom has been cast over the Irish Cistercian Monastery, Mount Saint Joseph, Roscrea, yesterday, by the death of Father Kevin Carroll, O.Cist., one of the first priests to enter at Roscrea Abbey.

A native of Kiltely, Co. Limerick, Father Kevin was about 70 years of age, and entered the Order about 50 years ago. Known to visitors from many lands, he was a noted scholar and an eloquent preacher in his earlier days at the Monastic Church. He was prominently associated with the Abbey ceremonial arrangements.

In his death the Cistercian community have sustained a great loss. For over 25 years he filled the position of Sacristan in seniority. He was next to Lord Abbot Justin McCarthy, who recently celebrated his silver jubilee. His death came after an illness of five days. The funeral and interment took place this morning after Office and High Mass.

A ROAD CRASH.

At Kilfrush, near Knocklong, on Saturday night, a coal lorry, the property of Mr. John Walsh, coal merchant, Knocklong, which was proceeding from Pallas to Knocklong, and which was being driven by Mr. C. Hogan, crashed into a dyke at a bend on the road at Kilfrush, and was badly damaged. Hogan, the driver, sustained injuries when he was pitched from the driving seat. The night was foggy, and it is thought the steering became
