Dublin and Cork Flooded.

Baldoyle Races Abandoned.

Rain fell in torrential fashion in Dublin and suburbs this morning and as a result it is announced that

Baldoyle Races, fixed for to-morrow, has been abandoned, owing to the flooded state of the course.

Messages from Cork City states that in some places rain reached a height of three feet.

Patrick Street and Oliver Plunkett were covered to a depth of a foot.

Shopkeepers waded to their premises. The loss of stock must be heavy.

The River Lee rose to great heights, bursting its banks, and enveloping the Lee fields in the south side of Cork City

Water lapped the walls of Trinity Church.

LATE REV. BRO. IGNATIUS WALL.

Following Requiem Mass at St. Patrick's, Baldoyle, yesterday morning, celebrated by the Rev. J. B. Warner, C.C., Chaplain, the funeral took place to St. Patrick's Cemetery of the late Rev. Bro. Ignatius Wall, whose death occurred at St. Patrick's on Friday last.

Brother Ignatius, who was a native of Dromcollogher, Co. Limerick, was a member of the Christian Brothers' Order for nearly sixty years. As a teacher, he served in Belfast, Cork, Waterford, Carlow, Dublin, Richmond Street, and other places in Ireland. Before coming to Baldoyle seven years ago, Brother Ignatius occupied the position of Superior at Thurles.
