

insurer, in his report, of local people's descriptions to the local money will be exhibit of the blind in Limerick.

FOOTPATHS

at Lock Quay

Limerick Chronicle."

the initiative character of the "Chronicle," you directed months ago to the slush where the footpath at Lock Quay.

At frost several people here, due mostly to the ground. It is now a thaw and the rains pedestrians have to wade through which is on one of the paths to the Irishtown street.

For some time has not been doing the stretch of old road, which has existed for months. A few shovels and road metal would be of great use.

DIRECT RATEPAYER.

mentioned in the House of Commons at Summer Time will be on Monday, February 25th.

Phroinnsias!

This week's "Trath na gCeisteanna" (Question Time) was of a somewhat higher standard than the preceding ones, but only seems to whet the appetite of the participants for more, whose resources of knowledge will need to be penetrated somewhat more by the versatile compere before he decides to raise the standard still further. Competition this week was enlivened by the keenness of the two remaining participants, which was won yet another time by Mairin Ni Fhinniucan. Tussles between compere and contestants was a new departure in this week's "Trath na gCeisteanna," and supplied several humorous interludes.

The title of the debate for Monday night next, at 9.15, "An ceart cosg a bheith ar Ghaedhealaibh i Luith Cheas Ghaedheal?" gives plenty scope for some "sharp shooting," as was evident when a "feeler" was thrown out to members for a "line-up" on this subject. So look out for "fireworks."

Ma ta suim agat i Ghaedhealaibh agus fonn throda ort, bi ann oidche Dia Luain seo chughainn ar 9.15 p.m., agus bheir duine des na Ghardaibh Siothchana leat!

DIED SAYING HIS PRAYERS.

While saying his prayers in the Augustinian Church, Limerick, yesterday afternoon, an aged man named Patrick Coughlan, farmer, Sixmilebridge, County Clare, had a heart failure and died.

The deceased came to Limerick to transact some business, and went into the church to pray before setting out on the homeward journey.

working-class houses

Mr. O'Malley said he made a mistake, and it was unfair to ask the brunt of it.

The City Maintenance tenants did not range the Local Government would refuse the Department was to pay loan charges on the condition that it not be agreeable to the expenditure.

Ald. Reidy—The Council in approving of the

HELPING LO

Mr. M. Keyes, has made a suggestion that gas meters be installed to save the cost of gas—a local authority's praiseworthy measure. The Department's attention should be drawn to this with an explanation of the reasons why, if unsuitable, they might be substituted.

After a long discussion the Council decided to instal six range meters in the Clonlara boro' to ascertain if they are suitable for the installation.

CLARE HOUSE

Gardai from O'Connell's Road searched a number of houses in the Clonlara district during the week in connection with the recovery of stolen rettes and money, the result of a lock-up shop of the Clonlara, Co. Clare. It has been made so far.