 been from our advertising in Riddelstown July pig market on Wednesday of next week. Now that there is a rise in prices of bacon, it is expected that the attendance of the fair will be up to expectations. Supplies will be again plentiful. I again remind readers of the half-holiday next week on Tuesday.

Force.
 100 members have now joined the Section of the Local Section and drilling operations have commenced. As yet there could join either the A. Section of the L.S.F., and it is expected will come along and join the Garda Barracks with the B. Section is also very popular and daily new recruits are being enrolled.

Jacobite Coin.

A copper coin about the size of a halfpenny was found a few days ago by workmen when excavating near the foundation of an old wall in Church Street, Rathkeale. On one side the coin has a harp surmounted by a crown, and the date, 1686. On the other side it has the head and title of the English monarch reigning at the time, James II.

A Timely Warning.

In view of the number of serious accidents that unfortunately occur about this time every year as a result of children riding on floats engaged in drawing hay from the meadows, it may be well to remind parents that riding on hay floats, which has a terrible fascination for innocent youngsters is a most dangerous practice, especially nowadays when the dangers from traffic on streets and public highways are so great.

Courteous and Efficient Garda.

A genial head mile faller from the people of the village and district awaited Garda John Harmon when he returned to his old station at Ballygarry last week. His departure from Athenry, where he had been on temporary transfer, was very much regretted by the general public of that parish, who found him an efficient and courteous police officer while in their midst.

Obituary.

It is with regret that we report the death of Miss Bridget Culhane, which occurred at her residence, Riddelstown, Rathkeale, early on Thursday morning, July 4th. Deceased, who was the daughter of the late Mr. Michael Culhane, had been in failing health for some time. An exemplary Catholic, she was a lady with many admirable virtues.

The Obsequies.

The remains were removed to St. Mary's Church, Rathkeale, on Thursday evening and the interment took place in the New Cemetery, Rathkeale, on Friday. The prayers at the graveside were read by Rev. P. Lynch, C.C.; Rev. T. Costello, C.C., and Rev. M. O'Grady, C.C.

kind of service they are behind the scenes and busy purchasing and fraders are urged to pay more attention to which means so much to all shoppers and retaining our customers.

The success of a business is to a large extent of its atmosphere. It is entitled to full consideration and pathetic attention but it must have some regard for those who are serving them. They are mutually dependent and it is to be practised by one by the other. Shop assistants have a great necessary atmosphere. Their patience is the life of the business and they are doing their shopping and closing time and the object is looking through the time while they are pictures of a day.

It is said that the retailers throughout the who are most expert of golden rule—find out what customers need and work at those things in pleasing to keep the local custom to or town is very desirable than one standpoint. It is not merely for the sake concerned but for the adjacent. The tendency to us by no means desirable, quite harmful in the long community in general themselves of course, but keeping custom in their in this matter the lessons gations mentioned afford useful pointers.
