

s energy and to his influence. Strange that a man like Thomas Spring-Rice, so useful to the community, should be taken away in the prime of life. There are things hidden from our eyes. We can't say why it is, but one thing at least is certain and it is this,—that if God works through His workmen, at least He continues His work.

“The church was wanted,” His Lordship said, “to make this church complete for all its needs. You have that result in an agreeable and comfortable church.”

Church Wardens and Select Vestry members present were—Mr. H. M. V. O'Brien, Mr. J. J. Copeland Langford, Mr. A. J. O'Brien and Mr. F. W. Scales. The church, which is built in beautiful style, was erected by the friends and supporters of the late Thomas Aubrey Rice. After the ceremony the church parish entertained the visitors at Ard-na-Coille, the residence of Mrs. F. W. Scales.

TA CARNIVAL

WAR CONTESTS

WEDDING

A wedding was solemnised in the church of the Sacred Heart, Ballycotton, Cork, Rev. Father O'Dwyer, officiating. The contracting parties were Mr. Maurice Quirke and Miss Mary A. O'Connor. The bride was Mr. W. J. Quirke, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Miss Annie O'Connor, N.T., sister to the bride, acted as bridesmaid. The bridegroom is a member of an old West Limerick family, and son of Mr. James and Mrs. Mary Quirke, Ballaugh, Abbeyfeale. His father is the second daughter of well-known farmer of the North Cork farming public would, no doubt, like to know when the sand filtration system will be resumed. Chlorine gives a very unpleasant taste to the water, and connoisseurs maintain that the chemical has a bad effect on tea.

DEEPLY REGRETTED

DEATH OF POPULAR LIMERICK MAN

It is with feelings of the most sincere regret that we announce the death of Mr. Liam O'Sullivan, 295 Griffith Avenue, Dublin, which occurred on Monday, after a rather protracted illness. Deceased was the only son of the late Mr. C. O'Sullivan, proprietor "Limerick Echo." For a long number of years, and up to the time of his death, deceased held the responsible position of Industrial Inspector, Department of Industry and Commerce, the duties appertaining to which he discharged with marked ability. Joining the service over a quarter of a century ago, he served in Limerick, Kilkenny, Cork and Dublin, and his duties brought him through the length and breadth of the country, his winning disposition gaining for him hosts of friends. Highly respected by all, it is little wonder that his premature passing should evoke widespread and general regret. Educated at the Crescent College, Limerick, deceased was a prominent figure in the sports activities of the College, playing with the Rugby team as scrum half, and later figuring with Garryowen in a similar capacity, prior to his transfer from Limerick to Kilkenny. The son of a Fenian father, he took an active interest in the struggle for the freedom of his country during the Black and Tan regime. He was a keen student of the native language, and for many years wore the Fainne. He was, indeed, a loyal friend, and in social life, a charming companion. To his sorrowing wife and five children we offer our heartfelt sympathy in their irreparable loss.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE

There is a strong movement in London, it is said in favour of appointing Mr. Lloyd George a member of the British War Cabinet. His supporters point out that he did a very big job in the first World War, that he has lost little of his tremendous vitality, that he understands the Germans and will
