

Funerals Leave

Pathetic scenes were witnessed when the funerals left Spanish point on Monday en route for Limerick. Several members of the Gardai were present and prominent officials of the E.S.B.

The remains arrived in Limerick on Monday night. A huge crowd of citizens met the cortege at the borough boundary and escorted the remains to St Michael's Parish Church, where prayers were recited. The tragedy has occasioned widespread regret in the city, where both Mr Harrington and Detective Officer Galvin were well known. A detachment of Gardai accompanied the sad cortege to the church where the coffins were laid before the High Altar.

The Late Mr Harrington

Mr Harrington, who was an extremely popular official of the Electricity Supply Board in Limerick, was a native of Tralee and aged about 41 years. By occupation an electrical engineer, he served for a period with a large electrical contracting firm in Manchester and subsequently with the E.S.B. in Tralee and Malrow, having been with the board some ten years. In Limerick he was in charge of the Installation Department for a number of years and had supervised creamery installations and power transmissions in the district. He had also been in charge of the change over of Limerick city and towns in the district from D.C. to A.C. current. He was an engineer of recognised ability and was held in high esteem not alone by his colleagues but by his supporters of the E.S.B. He leaves a wife and four children—one a boy and three girls—to mourn his loss. His daughter Helena was the eldest member of the family.

The funeral of Mr Harrington and his daughter—an extremely large and most representative cortege—took place this (Tuesday) evening to Mt. St Lawrence Cemetery, amidst every manifestation of general mourning.

Late D.O. Galvin

Detective Officer Galvin, who was aged about 35 years, was a native of Liscallane, Lixnaw, Co. Kerry. He joined the Garda in 1926, and served at the Depot, Dublin Castle, Leix and Offaly. He had been stationed in Limerick for the past eight years, and in 1932 became a member of the Detective Branch at William street. Of a quiet, unassuming disposition, he had made many friends in Limerick. He was a very conscientious and painstaking officer, and was a general favourite with his colleagues. He was a noted swimmer. He had been married only two years.

The interment of the remains of the late D.O. Galvin took place to-day (Tuesday) at the family burial place at Kiltomey, whither they were conveyed from Lixnaw.
