

In cases of RHEUMATISM
RHEUMATIC
JOINTS
LUMBAGO
ECZEMA
RASHES
ULCERS
SORES
PIMPLES
BOILS

insist on
CLARKES BLOOD MIXTURE

In LIQUID or TABLET FORM
 Of all Chemists and Stores

ABSOLUTE PROTECTION

ON THE RAINY DAY
 1 1/2d. 3d. 6d.

Those who lined out for Kilbenny were:—M. Mullins (Capt.), J. Gorman, M. Walsh, J. O'Sullivan, E. Dorney, J. Dorney, D. Russell, B. Howard, J. McKenna, M. Donoghue, M. Jones, P. McGrath, J. Lenehan, P. Condon, J. O'Brien, J. Howard, M. Slattery, J. O'Brien, J. Walsh.

Ballylanders was represented by the following:

M. Mansell (Capt.), P. Mulhane, D. Cleary, T. Mullane, D. Kelly, E. Mullane, D. Fitzgerald, P. Fitzgerald, P. Buckley, R. Fox, B. Condon, W. Crawford, E. Kiely, P. Crawford, J. McGrath.

ADARE NOTES

(From Our Correspondent).

Obituary.

The sympathy of a wide circle of friends and sympathisers goes out to Mr. and Mrs. James Neville, Adare, on the death of their daughter, Josephine, which occurred at the County Hospital, Croom, on June 28th, after a protracted illness at the early age of 22 years. A young girl with a gentle and affectionate disposition, she endeared herself to everybody. The remains were removed to the parish church on Saturday evening and the funeral took place the following day to Adare Cemetery.

The Carnival.

The carnival held at Adare came to a close on Sunday evening, 29th June. The weather throughout was beautifully fine, which added very much to the unqualified success of the carnival. The village was gaily decorated for the occasion and crowds of visitors from the surrounding districts came each evening to the "Home of Sylvan Splendour." Large numbers of competitors entered for the different competitions. One of the principal attractions were Perk's famous amusements, which were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The Arrangements.

The committee is to be congratulated on the arrangements in connection with the carnival, as everything passed off without the slightest hitch. A special word of praise is also due to the stall holders, etc., for the great help they gave during the whole time.

unemployed been harnessed several schemes of utility and improvement that the interest welfare of the nation demanded should be carried. This is a question that has long time been calling for answer and the people are entitled to get some more convincing reply than they have ever

* * *

Ministers tell us that no scheme or project has been held up for want of money. If this be so, it is an obvious indictment of the Government itself. Nobody doubts that there is on all sides a vast amount of work that could very profitably be put on hands. The British Government left us a huge legacy of money and this circumstance in itself provided the opportunity for launching a variety of essential developments that would at once absorb a large number of unemployed, thus lightening the burden of local and national taxation and giving a great stimulus to all trade and industry by ensuring a fuller and wider distribution of purchasing power.

* * *

The past, however, is gone and the only use to be made of it is to take guidance from it for the future. Apart from what is necessary to do in connection with the immediate emergency situation due to the war, the most urgent task ahead is that of providing continuous work for those who are unemployed. Relief schemes are at best a wholly inadequate make-shift and are a ruinous drag on the community without giving a worth-while return by way of compensation. The only way to bring real assistance to the unemployed and help the people in general is by making employment available to the huge numbers who have had to resort to the labour exchange to depend on private charity. Frankly, there should be no difficulty in solving this very problem, for there is plenty of work to be done and we have the assurances of those in authority that it is not want of money that is preventing it from being put on hands.