apt. Dunning said there was a y going round that some one twelve gallons of water. Justice—Well, I have no sym- ny for anyone who buys it.

he statement of Harold Rains- (read by Sergt. Boyle) went to say that they (the Rains- ds) put about two gallons of the "petrol" into the lorry and it d not start. They then dis- ered it was water. His brother l him he had given 50/- for it.

Mr. D. J. O'Malley, solr., defend- the Rainsfords, put it to the nness, who agreed, that so far the statement went Harold nsford had little to do with the cter.

Mr. Martin Tynan, solr. for elan, said that he was admitting offence. Heelan had unfor- ately succumbed to the tempta- n to buy the petrol in what ght be described as a black rket.

Justice—It is worse than a black rket because it was bought from soldiers.

Mr. Tynan said that Heelan, when approached by the Guards, admitted the offence and he was prepared to make good any loss which the Department had suffered as a result of the larceny.

Det. Sergt. Murphy stated that Heelan had a very good character.

Justice—As was said in the first case by the solicitor defending, if it was not for people like defend- ant, the soldiers would not steal, because they would not have any market. For being in illegal pos- session I will fine him £3 and order payment as compensation of £1 11s. 8d. to the Minister.

"While you have a motor car," added the Justice, "don't ever attempt anything like this again."

Mr. O'Malley pleaded that Harold Rainsford had hardly anything to do with the other case.

The Justice said that he would only fine one of the Rainsfords, William, £3, and order that the tins be handed back to the military.

"I'd like to say," concluded the Justice, "that if I get any more receivers of stolen property from soldiers I will send them to prison without option of a fine."

Supt. Dunning said that he knew that Heelan had been influenced by a third party.
