

disagree with Ald. Reidy e suggested that houses for g classes should be built near aces of employment. Workers be much better off from a point of view if they lived a e from their places of ement. They had to look ahead ualise what kind of a city k would be 50 years hence. ey had to consider the ques-transport. When the emerad passed, transport would lutionised, and people living outskirts of the city would ght to their places of em-at a trifling cost.

Russell agreed that the
of distance was greatly exed. In time to come the prof ingress and egress would ed by transport. It would be r investment to house the outside than in congested lose to industrial concerns. ople should be removed as ossible from dirt and stag-and foetid air. He objected, r, to the building of econouses in the Carey's Road when uneconomic houses ore urgently needed.

City Surveyor said that the ate question for the Coun-decide was—was the front-Carey's Road, Boherbuoy ward Street to come down?
decision was come to on estion he could not proceed s plans.

O'Malley said that the Coun-discussing a major questhout having any informato the probable cost. If they demolish the frontages of eets named huge sums in sation would have to be d the Council should have formation as to the expend-at was likely to ensue.

City Surveyor said that he require the services of a if he were to prepare an e.

O'Malley—When we come to th a grandiose scheme we have some information as probable cost. I do not to have any engineering lge but I do say that the r compensation will be be-10,000 and £15,000.

Casey—It will be at least

Reidy—The question of comon will be determined by itator and it would be feasible for the City
r to anticipate him.

Surveyor—That is the posi-My estimate would have to vague.

Manager said that the State ontribute two-thirds of the in respect of uneconomic and one-third in respect of c houses. The maximum
lowed for an uneconomic as £400 and for an economic 450. Building costs above ms would not be recognised

MAN'S GREATEST DIGNITY

The greatest dignity of man is to be a citizen of the Kingdom of God, the only ambition of absolute worth to be the friend and familiar of God, said Rev. T. Byrne, S.J., in a Lenten lecture in Dublin.

R.I.P. (1c)

were desirous that local authorities should proceed with house building the all-in maximum cost should be increased.

Mr. Casey—The Municipal Authorities Association have repeatedly asked the Government to increase the maximum figure but without avail.

Ald. O'Malley proposed that the further consideration of the scheme be adjourned pending a report from the Surveyor as to the probable cost of the scheme. He also proposed that the Department be asked to increase the maximum sums allowed for both economic and uneconomic houses.

Mr. Reddan seconded both propositions and they were declared passed unanimously.

Ald. Reidy said that he wished to correct what appeared to be a misconception of his views. He had not suggested that the new houses should be congested in the cleared sites in different parts of the city like Watergate, Palmerstown, Lady's Lane, Dominick Street, etc.
What he did suggest was that these places be built upon in accordance with modern requirements, providing for gardens and other amenities.
