managh, prior to 1849 when it was first opened. An old citizen told me some years ago that in 1832 and 1849 a great many people were buried there during the cholera morbus. The chapel was not finished until 1864 and vaults were constructed under the edifice. The interior was finished some years ago in mosaic, but before that the interior was painted. The Augustinian tomb is a short distance to the left of the chapel. Only two members of the Order are interred at St. Patrick's. These are Fathers Egan (1832) and Cronin (1835). This tomb is behind Dr. Young's grave, but there is no cross on it to warn vandals to pass on and respect the dead.—Yours faithfully,
"CITY VISITOR."

INVASION OF MATERIALISM

In a paper entitled "To-morrow," read at Tipperary Social Week, Mr. J. Nagle said that in the main many of our problems appear to have arisen from the invasion of a materialistic or neutral philosophy of life, which mobilised souls for material or economic ends.

to his own side the accident would have been avoided. In the circumstances he would give a decree for the amount claimed.

In an adjourned case in which Denis Comerford, Blackwater, sued Mary Sheahan, Ballyglass, Parteen, for £2 12s. 11d. in respect of goods sold and cash lent, Mr. Martin Tynan, solr. (Messrs. Tynan and Co.), who appeared for the plaintiff, said that the only point at issue was whether plaintiff had given credit for a sum of 17/5, which should not have been claimed in the first place. Since last Court day Mr. O'Malley, solr., who appeared for defendant and himself, had been unable to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion owing to the manner in which the accounts were kept, but he (Mr. Tynan) was satisfied that credit was given for the 17/5.

Mr. O'Malley said it would be better to hear the defendant on the point.

Defendant said she had a credit account with plaintiff for some time, but gave it up, and then paid cash for the goods she received. She got no goods on credit in the month of February, and, therefore, the sum of 17/5 was not due.

Mr. Tynan said that when the defendant originally agreed to pay the debt by instalments no mention was made of the 17/5.

Mr. O'Malley said that, according to plaintiff's own particulars, no goods were supplied to defendant on February 3rd.

The Justice gave a decree for the amount claimed in the civil bill, less 17/5.
