JURY STOPS TRIAL

The jury, as the defence was about to open, at the trial of John Brereton, farmer, Carbury, Co. Kildare, who was charged with the murder of Patrick Fagan, an ex-postman, interrupted the proceedings and intimated that they desired to bring in a verdict.

Mr. Justice Davitt said that the jury, if unanimous, could bring in a verdict at that stage.

The jury there and then returned a verdict of not guilty and the accused man was discharged.

eliminate any tendency to overcrowding.

Mr. Donnellan—It was I raised this matter originally and I'm satisfied that there is no congestion now.

The matter was not further discussed.

The Mayor said that he was making arrangements to summon the conference in connection with the proposal to set up in the city a Constituent College of the National University for Friday week. He proposed to have the conference as comprehensive as possible, as all educational interests, public representatives, and public bodies would be invited to attend.

SUDDEN DEATH DURING VISIT

The death of Mr. Edward B. Slattery, solr., Tralee, which took place suddenly at Mountshannon on Saturday evening last, is very much regretted in that district (writes our Killaloe correspondent). Mr. Slattery was a regular visitor for many years to Mountshannon during the dapping season. Accompanied by his brother and another gentleman, he arrived there on the previous Wednesday. After coming off the lake on Saturday evening the fishing party returned to Kean's Hotel, where they had been staying. The deceased was only seated when he expired. He was very popular and the Mountshannon people were deeply grieved on learning of his death. The funeral passed through Killaloe for Tralee on Sunday evening last.

IN MEMORIAM.

EARLIE (Tenth Anniversary)—In sad and ever-loving memory of Emily Earlie, Clare St., Limerick, who died on the 10th day of May, 1935. Sweet Jesus, have mercy on her soul. Mass will be offered at St. John's Cathedral on to-morrow (Thursday) at 8 o'clock.

Inserted by her loving husband and children

The Irish Tourist Board has been itself to good effect in various directions since it was set up. It is making wise use of its statutory powers, and many believe it should do a little more. By fixing minimum standards and hostel tariffs and by giving minimum standards of comfort it is effecting very useful and necessary reforms, but there is still scope for further work towards making our haunts more attractive and agreeable to visitors.

Apart from what the Tourist Board has done at the resorts themselves and should make every effort to add to their attractions for visitors. If the favourable impression will mean substantial improvements not only to a growing extent. Nature has been given in this country in its beauty but the never been made of did attractions. A opportunity for doing something in this direction not itself and adequate should be taken to turn it to the great advantage.
