The only sure supply of turf will be that which you can cut yourself. People in the turf areas can increase their output by using their family labour and producing a second or third cutting for sale.

How will you fare in this crisis? Have you made yourself independent of outside supplies? If not you are running a serious risk.

A chemist gave me the half a bottle of Kruschen Salts to try. After for about two weeks I felt getting less. That was eight months ago. I continued taking Kruschen Salts, and if you had seen me now you would be surprised."

Mrs. T. McNAMARA, KNOCKANES

It is with sincere regret we have to record the death of Mr. Thomas McNamara, which took place at his residence, Knockanes, Adare on Friday, 13th inst. The deceased was a sterling Irishman of a most genial and obliging disposition, perfectly honest and straightforward, who took a great interest in the industrial welfare of his native parish, being one of the founders of the Black Abbey Co-Operative Dairy Society, and a member of the committee since its inception. He was also a member of the Adare Co-Operative Society, which is doing an extensive business. His remains were removed to the parish church on Saturday evening, 14th inst., and the funeral took place to Adare Cemetery on Sunday, the cortège being one of the largest and most representative seen in the district for a long time.

Remember they may have a garden, too, and may or may not be as successful as you. Give them a chance of telling you something about theirs. One of the best pleasures a gardener has is in giving his surplus plants to neighbours, but don't try to foster the bad stuff on him. Give him a bit of your rarest plant. That will please most as you will be demonstrating your knowledge of plants.

GARDENING

The Judging Of Gardens

I am often occupied for many weeks at this time of the year judging gardens. In fact, I am busy with many competitions at the moment, and, incidentally, I shall be judging the Kilcrea gardens next week, actually on the 6th of July. One of the things that surprises me most regarding these competitions is that there are so few competitors. Apart from the encouragement of the good prizes offered, one would imagine that all the neighbours would vie with one another to have the most beautiful and well-stocked gardens. I often hear said that a good example is the best sermon, but this is not always true in the garden line, anyway. I have seen the most beautiful gardens often in the midst of totally neglected ones. And, by the way, this is another amazing thing which I find from time to time—a well-stocked and beautiful garden not entered for the competition.

HINTS FOR COMPETITORS.

Nothing is more evident to the trained eye of the judge than a well-planned, cultivated and cared-for garden. Plants respond to the love and care bestowed on them, and no amount of hasty cropping and patching the day before the judge arrives will make a neglected garden good. It takes several months for the quickest crops to mature and their quality at any stage of their growth reflects to the judge's eye the care that has been given them from their babyhood.

This does not mean, however, that a final touch up should not be given before the judge arrives. On the contrary, the lawns, paths, borders and beds should have a final shave and brush up. It is wonderful how that final neat touch will enhance an already well-stocked garden and improve even the plot with only fair quality crops. I might add that a garden may be well stocked with good quality crops and fail to get a prize owing to the neglect of the paths, borders, edges and lawns.

If you have fair quality crops, make the most of them by showing them off in tidy surroundings. Pull that weed out there and that brown leaf off the cabbage. One that is gone to seed, put it on the manure or compost heap, and, by the way, the judge will take a sharp note of how the compost heaps are stored. Manure is scarce and anything that will rot to make humus for the garden ought to be stored in a tidy heap and turned from time to time to rot it down to make good manure.

There is nothing more untidy than an uncut lawn. If you have no lawn mower, borrow one or cut the grass with a shears, or don't have a lawn at all.

When taking plants see that the stakes are hidden behind the plants and that the twine is not too much in evidence.

Try, if possible, to have your garden orderly with the crops in their own plots and not mixed up higgidy piggidy. Potatoes, cabbages, lettuce, peas and beans; roots, leeks and celery is the order for the vegetable garden, and the fruits, if any, should be by themselves.

Points are often awarded for special features, such as an old wall or ugly shed hidden by a useful and well-trained plum, pear tree or other wall climber, and a nice well-furnished window box, rustic archway or seat often takes the judge's eye.

His main concern, however, at the present time will be to note if all available space is occupied by useful and good quality vegetables, so that your garden will reflect your efforts to increase the nation's food supply at this critical time.

REWARD FOR LABOUR SPENT.

Whether you are a prize winner or not you will be rewarded in many ways in accordance with the amount of care that you have bestowed on your plants.

There is a certain amount of pleasure derived from the actual gardening operations and remember while you are gardening you are out of other mischief, but there is great pleasure in seeing plants grow in response to your every-day attention and when the fruits of your toil are presented in the kitchen there is abundant reward in the praise forthcoming from the household for the good things you have provided with your own hands. And again one gets a good deal of enjoyment out of showing your friends your achievements although one must beware not to be a bore in this respect. Other people will hate your garden if you keep on harping about its good qualities all day long.

Remember they may have a garden, too, and may or may not be as successful as you. Give them a chance of telling you something about theirs. One of the best pleasures a gardener has is in giving his surplus plants to neighbours, but don't try to foster the bad stuff on him. Give him a bit of your rarest plant. That will please most as you will be demonstrating your knowledge of plants.

SPLENDID FEIS

Tuamgraney Gaels Assemble

Feis Gáimh Naomhána was held in Tuamgraney on Sunday, June 16th (writes our Killaloe correspondent). The weather, the large crowd, the many competitors, the high standard of competition, the local seven-a-side tournament, the parade and display by the Scariff L.D.F., headed by the Tuamgraney Pipe Band, all helped to make the event an outstanding success in a historic setting. Here, according to tradition, lies buried Brian O'Brien's daughter, and from whom Tuamgraney takes its name. Residents will still kindly point out her grave to the inquiring visitor. She was drowned in Lough Graney and floated down to Derry Graney and is buried in Tuamgraney. Still to be seen here is St. Cronan's Church, rebuilt in 961 by Cormac O'Ceallin, Abbot of Tuamgraney, re-edified and enlarged by Brian Boru in the year 1000, but now used as a place of Protestant worship. Outside the village, on the Bodyke road, the visitor can also see the holy well of St. Cieran, who died in the year 552.

At night, a concert, in commemoration of the centenary of the death of Thomas Davis was held in Tuamgraney Hall. All the more notable songs of Thomas Davis were sung in unison by a choir composed of the night and day students of the Vocational School.

Mrs. Woodhouse, Ennis, deserves special praise for the way in which she adjudicated the dancing. Other adjudicators were—The Very Rev. Canon O'Malley, P.P.; V.F. Killakee; Sup't. Murray (do); Messrs. P. Comer (do); W. Mulcahy, C.E.O. Ennis; P. Kiely, Bodyke; S. O'Connor, Scariff; Miss M. Scanlon (do); R. Jackson, Limerick; and S. MacScaulaoich, Treoruidhe, Connemara Naiscuma na Gaedhilge.

Mr. O'Dwyer, chairman; Miss M. Morrissey, secretary; Mr. P. Vaughan, M.A., headmaster, and the committee are to be congratulated on the success of the feis. A special word of thanks is due to the following, without whose generosity the holding of the Feis would be an impossibility—Messrs. J. Brady, M.C.C.; M. Droney, creamery manager, and P. MacMahon, Whitegate.

Mr. Mulcahy, who delivered the oration, spoke in Irish and in English.

In the course of an able address Mr. Mulcahy said that we had our freedom now in the Twenty-Six Counties, and had free permission to speak and write Irish on all occasions. The Government was doing everything possible for the language revival, but no Government, however enthusiastic, can restore the language without the full co-operation of the people. There were many obstacles to be overcome, the radio, the films, foreign dances and foreign games, and many newspapers were working against the language. The old culture is passing away and the new culture setting in. Unless we are satisfied, said Mr. Mulcahy, to the holding of the Feis.

Mr. Mulcahy paid a great tribute to Mr. Vaughan, M.A., Headmaster, Scariff Vocational School, and to the members of the Feis Committee.

Very Rev. Canon O'Malley, who proposed a vote of thanks to the speaker (seconded by Mr. Brady, M.C.C.), said that the spoken language had made great progress in the Scariff district for the past few years. He paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Vaughan and to the committee for the success of the function.
