

but did not avail of it, and the son brought in a pony, the property of the injured party. They left at 5.30 a.m., and on the way out to Askeaton picked up Aymor. When they returned they abandoned the pony at a Corporation dump. As a result of their action O'Donoghue was searching for his pony for a number of days before he found him and was at the loss of a few days' wages.

Supt. Collieran said that all three defendants had records.

The Justice said it was not a very serious case and he would impose a suspensory sentence of one month each on the defendants on condition that the Considines each paid 15/- and Aymor 10/- compensation within 14 days.

Mr. D. G. O'Donovan, solicitor, appeared for Aymor.

HORSE KILLED

—oo—

BOLTED IN STREET

At about 11 a.m. on last Monday morning a horse-drawn float laden with timber, the property of Messrs. James McMahan & Son, was seen careering wildly down the Clyde Road and later to crash into a wall. As a result of the impact the horse received fatal injuries. Fortunately there was very little activity as far as pedestrians or traffic was concerned and there was no one injured. A young man named Joseph Hickey, an employee of Messrs. McMahan, jumped off the car he was in charge of and made a plucky effort to stop the horse, but to no avail.

the decision of the Labour Court.

The strike notice was to take effect as from midnight to-morrow (Saturday) night.

The Labour Court has at present under consideration the men's claim for a higher wage, and it is expected that an award will be made early next week.

DEATH OF DR. FRANK O'MARA

The death took place some days ago at a very advanced age, of Dr. Frank O'Mara, Cusack Road, Ennis. The deceased was for a long period the R.M.S. of Clare Mental Hospital, from which position he retired under the age limit some years ago. He was a member of a prominent and highly-respected Limerick family, being a brother of the late Senator Stephen O'Mara and of the late Joseph O'Mara, the world-famous operatic tenor, and uncle of Mr. Stephen O'Mara, Chairman of O'Mara, Ltd., bacon curers. The last surviving son of the late James O'Mara, founder of the great bacon industry still bearing his name, he was a deservedly very popular figure and enjoyed the confidence and respect of an exceedingly wide circle of friends and acquaintances. His funeral at Ennis on Monday last was very large and representative. It was attended by prominent people from all parts of the country.

ADARE FLOODED AGAIN

For the second time this year (writes our Adare correspondent) the heavy rains have flooded Adare. Some houses suffered badly and roads were impassable, especially from the village to the railway station. A large area of the charging for cigarettes approximately thirty-third per cent. of the lawful prices.

Sydenham was also charged on two counts of having sold goods at excessive prices, the charges in each case being 12/-. These two charges were on sales of twelve gross of goods. This defendant was charged on six counts of having sold goods at excessive prices to the defendant. These six counts were on charges amounting to 12/-, which, when considered to the proper amounts, have been realised for the defendant. Murnahan stressed, that the sales were made to Ryan in order to make a profit on these goods on to high prices.

ADMISSION TO THE MARKET

In a statement to the court on November 24th, 1945, Ryan admitted having dealt in the market. Ryan, he said, had offered him commodities, which he then started dealing and his sales to Ryan in the last nine months amounted to £1,000. All his sales were at excessive prices.

Mr. Murnahan contended that Sydenham should have sold goods at wholesale prices, which would have been abundant on the market. Ryan, he said, had controlled maximum pricing a certain margin. "When the consumer goods, I shudder to think of them, were paying for them."

Ryan, said Mr.
