included Schubert's "Ave Maria,"
"The Old House," and "Maureen." The last mentioned was written by Sir Hugh Robertson, conductor of the famous Glasgow Orpheus Choir, and given to Count John, who passed it on (after making a private recording) to Maurcen O'Sullivan, who starred with him in "Song O' My Heart." Sean will be singing for the Manchester Irish on St. Patrick's Night in the Albert Hall in that city. He is also going to Rome for a 12 months course.
You may have heard him in John MacDonogh's play "Attempted Murder," on New Year's Day.

TAUGHT IRISH IN WEST LIMERICK

Mr. Sean Kavanagh ("Sean a Chota"), the well-known Gaelic scholar, who died suddenly yesterday in Dublin, taught Irish under the Rathkeale Coiste Ceanntair of the Gaelic League over forty years ago. A native of Dingle, where he was born 63 years ago, he had been engaged for the past couple of years in compiling a new Irish dictionary.
