VERY GOOD FARE

ENTERTAINMENT AT FOYNES

On Sunday night last, the 20th inst., a very enjoyable entertainment was staged by the Foynes Dramatic Class in St. Senan's Hall.

The function was opened by the Foynes troupe of Irish step dancers, who danced the four, six and eight-hand reels. Those taking part were Misses Una Doyle, Geraldine Monahan, Carmel Walsh, Patricia Shanahan, Margaret Brennan, Rita King, Kathleen Woulfe and Bernadette Hannigan.

The next item was a troupe of six sailors singing a number of enjoyable sea shanties, those taking part being Messrs. J. Hurley, J. O'Donovan, J. Brennan, J. Heffernan, E. Nestor and J. Sillery.

Next in the programme came the play, entitled "Riders to the Sea." The artistes in this play all did their part very well, and their acting deserves a special word of praise. They are as follows:—Miss M. Reidy, N.T.; Mrs. Hurley, Mrs. O'Doherty and Miss M. J. Cunnane; Misses P. Jackson, P. Duffley.

After the play came a sketch, entitled "The Dentist," in which Messrs. J. Hurley, P. Duffley and E. Nestor took part. This sketch, which was very humorous, drew peals of laughter from the audience.

Next Mr. P. J. Dundon delighted the audience when he sang "The Meeting of the Waters" and "The Old House."

The performance was ended with a selection of "darkie" songs, which were sung by the same troupe that contributed the sea shanties.

The novel feature of the evening was question time, in which two teams of six in each team competed.

GARDENING

Vegetative Propagation

By vegetative propagation meant, the increasing of plants other means than by seeds. For instance, a gardener will generally increase his stock of rhubarb by dividing the stools with a spade. Each crown will form a new plant. He could, of course, increase his stock from seed, but apart from the longer time required for the plants to mature from seed, the plants in this case, will in all probability, not breed true; many wildlings may be among the seedlings.

Vegetative propagation, therefore, has, in many cases, definite advantages over seed in that in addition to it being a handy way to increase plants, we can be sure that in most instances the vegetatively propagated plant will be true to the parent, i.e. will have the very same characteristics.

MANY METHODS.

It is very fortunate that so many plants lend themselves to this method of propagation, and the plant breeder makes every use of this facility. If he happens to raise a good new variety, which may not come true from seed, he will very frequently be able to increase it by vegetative means.

For instance, if it is a new variety of strawberry, he will increase it from runners. If a gooseberry, currant or a shrub he will increase it from cuttings. If it be a new herbaceous plant he will divide the root; but if it happens to be a new variety of apple, pear, etc., he will increase it by grafting.

In nature, we find many examples of natural vegetative propagation, the wheat tillers, the bramble tips root when they touch the ground and make new plants, the butter-cup or crow-foot increases by offsets and the raspberry and scotch-grass send up suckers all over the place.

INCREASE PLANTS NOW.

Talking of vegetative propagation reminds me that now is the time to increase many garden plants from cuttings or by division. For instance, the following are some of the plants that can be divided now:—Pyrethrum, Bearded Iris, Saponaria, Primroses and Primulas, Heuchers, Pulmonaria, Solomon's Seal, etc., and the following can be increased now from cuttings, double and single Arabis, Aubrietia, Violas, Catmust Border Carnations and Pinks.

FRAME CUTTINGS.

All the foregoing can be increased out of doors. There are, however, many shrubs that should be propagated now from cuttings made from half ripened shoots or soft wood cuttings. These have to be put into sandy soil in a frame facing north, and the following are among those that can be propagated now in this manner:—Lavender, Rosemary, Osmanthus, Cupressus varieties, Spiraeas, Cotoneasters, Golden Privet, Philadelphus or Mock-Orange, Berberis, Thuja Plicata Aurea, etc.

There are many shrubs, the cuttings of which are easily rooted outdoor in winter, for instance, everyone knows the Yellow Forsythia that flowers in March, and the flowering currant is also well known. These two are examples of hardy shrubs that are easily propagated from cuttings inserted outdoor in October.

The shrubs I have mentioned for the frame, however, are not so easily rooted, hence the frame. This frame may face the north, but there is another kind of frame called a sand frame for this work. The sand frame faces the south.
