

...as he could assist, every employer in the city would give the workers attending the course every possible facility, including the weekly half-day, to participate in all the lectures.

VOCATIONAL COMMITTEE'S HELP.

Mr. P. J. Donnellan, B.C., Chairman of the City of Limerick Vocational Education Committee, expressed his Committee's thanks to the authorities of U.C.C. for their co-operation in getting the course started. To the applicants who had been chosen to avail of the course he promised the full assistance of his Committee. The Municipal Technical Institute was placed at their disposal and any other facility they might require, which was within the means of his Committee to afford, would be made available for the asking.

A COLLEGE COURSE.

Professor Busted said that he wanted to make one point about the course quite clear. The course had the status of a college course and the diplomas which would be awarded as a result of a successful completion of the course would be college diplomas. Those who attended the course were students of a college.

Referring to Mr. Russell's point about a possible course for employers, Professor Busted said he agreed there was need for such a course, but every person attending such courses should realise that they had not been established for the purpose of an occasional chat on economics or social problems—or the Marshall Plan. Every person enrolled would have to put his shoulder to the wheel for two long years in order to comply with the aims of the organisers.

A vote of thanks to his Lordship for presiding was proposed by the Mayor, who also thanked Dr. O'Rahilly for his great assistance and co-operation in getting the course under way.

Mr. Russell seconded the proposed vote of thanks, which was passed with acclamation.

GREAT AND MOST IMPORTANT BEGINNING.

Replying briefly, his Lordship again mentioned that having been asked to preside at such an important function was to him a privilege and an honour. Having paid a tribute to Dr. O'Rahilly, he said that the authorities of U.C.C. were spreading their tentacles with, he hoped, considerable eventual success. This, he said, was a great and most important beginning and he wished to avail of it to associate himself with the tributes paid to Dr. O'Rahilly and his Cork colleagues.

WHAT COURSE CONSISTS OF.

The Course consists of five subjects:—

1.—Economics.

The treatment will be more practical and less detailed than that which is employed for training professional economists. It will cover such subjects as Production, Consumption, Exchange, Distribution, Money, Unemployment, Government and Local Finance, Taxation, Industrial, Professional and Commercial Organisation, Statistical Methods, the Interpretation of Statistics and sources of information. Special attention will be paid to the historical background.

2.—Accounting.

LATE MR. R. G. BALL, SOLICITOR

Before opening the business of the Liberties Court to-day, Justice D. F. Gleeson referred to the recent death of Mr. Robert G. Ball, solicitor (Messrs. F. M. Fitt and Co.).

The Justice said that since members of the legal profession were last there in Court, death had taken from them, in tragic and sudden fashion, their colleague, Mr. Robert G. Ball. He felt sure that he was only interpreting in their minds if he said a few words about what his loss meant to all of them.

His Worship said he had known the late Mr. Ball for close on eight years and he always seemed to him to be an ideal, quiet and unassuming good young lawyer. Now his passing had come at a time when he had years of happy, fruitful and successful work before him. On this account his sudden passing was tragic to his wife and to the firm to which he was attached.

"Sympathy is very little help on occasions of this kind, but we would like them to know that they have our sympathy," said the Justice.

The Justice concluded in sympathising with Mr. J. A. Dodds, solicitor (Messrs. F. M. Fitt and Co.), on the loss of the deceased, and asked that he convey the sympathy of the Court to the widow of Mr. Ball. "In the passing of Mr. Ball we have lost a kind colleague," said the Justice.

Mr. J. S. McNeice, solicitor, on behalf of the legal profession, joined in the remarks of the Justice, and said that he and the late Mr. Ball had studied together in Dublin and they knew each other intimately. The deceased was a fine character and a loyal colleague, and it was hardly realised that he had gone to his reward. He sympathised with Mrs. Ball and Mr. Dodds.

Supt. P. Colleran, on behalf of the Gardai, associated himself with the remarks of the previous speakers.

Mr. J. A. Dodds, solr. (Messrs. F. M. Fitt & Co.), said that on behalf of the widow of the deceased, and on his own behalf, he was exceedingly thankful for the kindly words expressed. The late Mr. Ball was associated with him for the past eight years, and naturally he had known him better than any of his colleagues. He could say that the words so kindly expressed were in no way extravagant, because the deceased was a first-class lawyer and he got on well with his colleagues.
