DEANNA DURBIN TO FILM IN ITALY. Deanna Durbin is to go to Italy to star in a musical picture, as yet untitled, for Scalera Productions.

NEW CAMERA TECHNIQUE. For the first time in an English film, cinema audiences will be able to follow, at close quarters, the yard by yard progress of a real horse race when Sydney Box's new Gainsborough comedy-thriller, "The Calendar," comes to Limerick.

MA HIGHLIGHTS. The most impressive of Charles Chaplin's "Verdoux" was the background music, composed by the star. It was used effectively and when you tried to hear it. In fact, the chief reason why it is impressive and suitable for itself was a triumph of the best-known actor, acting in the Carlton's "Red French production, "The Walls," was yet another of the Continental's most artistic. The most exclusive presentation of the week was the "Paris On The Seine," one of the most beautifully filmed travelogues it has ever good fortune to see. It was by Jack Cardiff, "dit dit" and I knew that something extra special cameraman, whose of the Holy Land are SAVOY ORGANIST. Irtney, resident organist of the Savoy Cinema, Limerick, has for some weeks ago. Jack, very popular cinema, was noted for his well planned recitals. His "The Emerald Isle," in one of these was a very pleasant surprise. I understand that these recitals were made in the Grand Central in the very near future.

The list is now complete to October 17th, no further licences having been issued to date. The list has been arranged numerically for easy reference, but it should be remembered that this is not the order in which they were issued. Licences are issued in alphabetical order, i.e., the oldest licence is E14B and the most recent E16X.

MISCELLANY. Although the Royal Cinema in Cecil Street is now open over a year, the frontage has not yet been completed. "Still" cases, neon lighting, special lighting under the canopy, and many other exclusive features are yet to be fitted and so complete Limerick's newest cinema.

THE HOLSON STORY. "The Holson Story" is definitely booked for a return visit to the Grand Central in the very near future.

RUSSIA may not be all we imagine from the newspapers. In the December Reader's Digest, Sam Welles describes his recent visit to this land of battle-scarred and decaying churches. Behind the iron curtain, he found an appalling lack of communications—not a car or lorry to be seen in 600 thickly populated miles! A revealing sidelight on the human day-to-day problems of the ordinary Russian people who don't want war and don't make headlines.

World's Biggest Food-Raising Scheme. A year ago—impenetrable jungle; by 1952—three million acres in East Africa will grow groundnuts. Read how British skill and enterprise, using everything from war-surplus bulldozers to rusting tanks found in the El Alamein desert, are working a miracle to provide Europe with fats and oils.

They Used to Have to Die. Penicillin can be found on melons, streptomycin taken from a chicken's mouth, chloromycetin trapped from the soil. Paul de Kruif writes about medicine's greatest recent discovery, the antibiotics—and how these "good bugs" now rescue millions of people who, only seven years ago, would have been doomed.

WIDELY MOURNED

Popular Limerick Man

PASSES AWAY IN BOYLE

A popular and widely mourned Limerick man passed away recently in Boyle, Co. Roscommon, in the person of Mr. P. J. Bourke, head of the book-binding department of the "Roscommon Herald" Printing Works.

The following obituary notice and appreciation appeared in the "Roscommon Herald," dated November 13th:—

With feelings of deep regret we announce the death, which occurred at his residence, St. Patrick's Street, Boyle, on Saturday morning last, of Mr. Patrick J. Bourke, who had been a member of the staff of "Herald" Works, Boyle, for over forty years.

Deceased had been ill for but a few weeks, and his death came as a deep shock to his legion of friends in Boyle and elsewhere, and particularly to the staff of the "Herald" Office, where, as the oldest member of the staff, he was loved and respected almost as the father of a family.

He had long associations with the late Jasper Tully, M.P., Managing Director, "Herald" Works, and up to a few weeks ago held his position as head of the book-binding department, which, under his supervision and with his careful attention to detail, turned out some magnificent work. He commenced his trade in his native Limerick and being a real master of his craft and having a wide knowledge of the printing trade in general, his advice was invaluable and will be missed by his colleagues on the staff.

GREAT SENSE OF HUMOUR

Quiet, unobtrusive and possessing a grand sense of humour, he won his way to a special corner in the hearts of all with whom he came in contact. His kindness, his amiable manner and his willingness to give a helping hand whenever it was needed were traits of a man who will long be remembered and sadly missed by all who held the privilege of knowing him. He possessed all those qualities that go to make up a real gentleman—one whose memory will live long and clearly.

The remains were removed to St. Joseph's Church, Boyle, on Sunday evening, and were received by Rev. B. J. Tiernan, C.C. Solemn Requiem High Mass for the repose of his soul was celebrated in St. Joseph's Church, on Monday morning. Celebrant of the Mass was Rev. Killian Mattimoe, O.F.M.; deacon, Rev. B. Tiernan, C.C.; sub-deacon, Rev. Dr. McLoughlin, C.C.; master of ceremonies, Very Rev. J. Canon Mulligan, P.P., V.F.

The large attendances at the obsequies and in particular at the funeral, which took place to Assylinn Cemetery, on Monday evening, bore striking testimony to the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

Rev. B. Tiernan, C.C., officiated at the graveside. The chief mourners were: Mrs. Susan Bourke (widow); Dermot, Patsy, John, William Bourke (sons); Mrs. Dorothy Quick (daughter); David Bourke (brother); John and Roger Bourke (nephews); Mrs. T. J. Murphy (niece); Mrs. J. Bourke (sister-in-law); Mr. P. Nally (brother-in-law); Mrs. B. Nally, Messrs. John, Patrick, Robert Nally; Misses Bridie and Rosaleen Nally; Mr. T. J. Murphy (relatives).

AN APPRECIATION

The "grand old man" of the staff has passed on. The news of his death came to me and to all of us as a deep shock. A few weeks ago he was among us and then death, the reaper, came along and stole him away. The witty word, the hearty laugh, the cheerful countenance are gone and only memories remain. But they shall live as long as life does for all who knew him. He had the gift of winning, without effort, his way to hearts. Kind, unobtrusive, unpretentious, despite his wide knowledge, good humoured and sincere, he bore no grudge and had no enemy. I never heard an unkind word come from his lips—it was not part of his make-up.

Old and young loved "Mr. Bourke," as he was known to all of us. He was just as a father to all of the younger generation—he radiated kindness and benevolence. He always took a pride in the work he performed so conscientiously and so well—he didn't tolerate slipshod or half-hearted effort. I am sure that as he went with a smile through the Golden Gates he took a long look at the Book in which his was the last name to be written in large shining letters and, being at last completely satisfied, proceeded to take his place in that eternally happy home, where peace and joy ever reign and sorrows never come.

BRUFF FAIR.

SOCIETY RULES

The Carpenters And Joiners

APPRENTICESHIP QUESTION

(To the Editor, "Limerick Leader.")

Dear Sir—From time immemorial up to December 6th, 1899, the date when the local carpenters of the Mechanics' Institute, Bank Place, became annexed to the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, with their headquarters at 95 Brunswick Street, Ardwick Green, Manchester, England, the admission of apprentices to the Society, to those who wished to have their sons apprenticed to the carpentry trade, was as follows (this only applied to men outside the Society):—The parent of the boy paid a fee of £21-£10 10s. to the builder and £10 10s. to the society. The question was often asked—Why pay £10 10s. to the Society? The reason was that if the employer failed the society was responsible to see that the boy would serve his full apprenticeship as a carpenter to some other employer, but this reason was often laughed at. Now during my time as an officer in the local Society a builder (R.I.P.) did fail and after, during my time as branch secretary to the A.S.C. and Joiners, Limerick branch, we were compelled to place that boy with another employer to finish his time, and we did. But with the inception of the A.S.C. and Joiners on 6th December, 1899, the apprentice fee to the Society ceased.

Now, I notice recently at a Vocational meeting in the Technical Institute, a question was raised re certain claims that were not entertained for admission to the carpentry class. Now the same rule governs all classes now, as when I was secretary of the A.S.C. and J., viz., when classes are filled no further admission; and what I used to do was I got all the boys in the junior section of the branch to enter the carpentry class when filled; no more admitted. Now the same applies to-day and no matter who you are or where you hailed from, the law must be carried out—no admission if class is filled.

Now to those in the building trades, boys and young men, take my advice, enter some class attached to the building trade; be sincere in your attendance, and the time may come when you may fill the position as teacher, if not in Limerick, perhaps elsewhere. See for yourself in your own city are there not several teachers who served their time as carpenters? So look sharp; your time may be near at hand, too; do not let a golden opportunity pass you. An old saying is that "Opportunity knocks at everyone's door once." Avail of it.

Now, to conclude, about apprentices, after the carpenters' strike on 17th January, 1902, Michael White and myself set to and drafted a code of rules and agreement for apprentices, which were submitted to the members and the builders and agreed to. In these rules wages and time were specified and special facilities were granted to the boys who attended their classes in the Technical Institute, viz., a lesser time for their apprenticeship, etc. Like all other good things, and when the live wires left office, this system lapsed, but in some years afterwards it was revived. To-day I do not know how apprentices stand, re the Technical Institute, and if the scheme is not in existence more is the pity, for after all a lesson in theory at times in addition to what is in practice all day is surely a great help to a youthful mind. It is only in after years a boy will see the fruits of his learning, and again I may state it ought to be of interest to the parents of those boys who are serving their time in the building trade—viz., carpenters, masons, plasterers—to look after their children's future by seeing to their regular attendance at the Technical Institute. Do it while the time is ripe, and have no regrets afterwards. To guardians of those boys I definitely say, when necessary, their qualifications will mean success. Now, I used the word—"Qualification." Let us see what the rules of the A.S.W. say to entitle you to membership of that body. Candidates for admission must be qualified workmen in good health and of good character. Members proposing and seconding any person shall do so verbally, and on the night of admission attend to give all necessary information, etc. Now, I say, without fear of any contradiction, that the boy who serves his time as a carpenter, and attends the Technical Institute, need have no doubt of his qualifications.

Trusting that this article will be the means of enlightening those who have no knowledge of the workings of the Carpenters' Society for at least 60 years, and my wish is to those who attend the Technical Institute a bright and happy future. I say to them—see to it yourself.—Yours faithfully,

JOHN REDDAN, 23, O'Curry Place, Limerick.
